O'Hare Helped Save U. S. Force Before Plane Was Downed

By Eugene Burns

Aboard a U. S. Carrier in the Central Pacific, Nov. 29 (Delayed) (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. Edward H. (Butch) O'Hare, famous fighter pilot, was shot down in a night air battle over the central Pacific two nights ago while American airmen were breaking up an attack of 30 or 40 Japanese torpedo planes on a United States carrier force, his flying companions said today.

It was the first time in a naval action that carriers had launched their aircraft at night. Butch decided to go up himself with the squadron.

Stories told by a squadron commander, a fighter pilot, radioman and gunner, the last to see O'Hare in the air, were not in complete agreement. But the action was swift and in the darkness it was natural that none of them would know exactly what happened.

"For three days Butch and I were standing by for our Japanese-stalking attack," said Lieut. Comdr. John L. Phillips, we had difficulty sticking together when it got dark. But we were lucky and were joining up when we ran smack into the Japs rendezvousing.

One Jap Shot Down

"Butch came up on my starboard and wingman Skon on the port. Then my gunner Kernan saw a fourth plane coming up below Butch. I gave him permission to fire as soon as we were within range. At that same time I overhauled a Jap and got into his slipstream and at 50 yards knocked him into a tea kettle.

"Meanwhile on the other side of our carrier task force, 30 miles distant, a Jap dropped a series of flares for a torpedo attack illumination and our ships were clearly outlined.

"I was closing in on a second Jap when the fireworks started. I was shooting at a Jap, and my gunner was shooting at a Jap who in turn was shooting at O'Hare.

"My target exploded and blew up beautifully, with at least a quarter of a mile torch of gasoline trailing behind him before he hit the water.

"While I was watching the Jap burn I saw something drop straight off into the water, making a big splash. Then I thought, 'My God, that may be Butch.'

"Butch, This is Phil"

"I attempted to make contact, calling, 'Butch, this is Phil' over and over, but I got no response. I kept thinking the splash lasted a long time and it may have been Butch's parachute. Now I think it was a Jap plane which Butch shot down."

Ensign Warren A. Skon, 24, of St. Paul, Minn., who was flying wing on O'Hare when they started to join Phillips, said, "The air was suddenly thick with Japs.

"One Jap had dropped a flare and this may have been the plane Phillips shot down.

"As we joined on Commander Phillips, Butch said, 'You take the side you want!' I said 'I'll take the port.'

"'Roger,' he said, and that was the last word he said.

"Then I saw tracers around his plane. I saw it sheer off and drop quickly below us."

Another version of the last seen of O'Hare, termed by President Roosevelt one of the greatest combat fliers of all time, was told by Aviation Ordnance Man Alvin B. Kernan, 20, of Saratoga, Wyo.

"I saw Butch and Skon joining up," he said. "Then as I looked to the starboard a fourth plane was closing in on us. It was very dark but because I could see Skon off our port I knew this was a Jap.

Blinded by Tracers

"I informed Mr. Phillips and he gave me permission to fire as soon as he was in range. My tracer fire seemed to go into him, but I was blinded by tracers and my gun muzzle which was white with heat. I don't know whether I shot down the Jap.

"While I was firing I saw Commander O'Hare do a wingover across the top of us and he disappeared into the darkness. A few moments later it seemed that he reappeared and made an outside loop. Then he was gone."

Lieut. (j. g.) Hazen B. Rand, 25, Avon, Mass., who was shot in the foot during the action, said:

"I saw a fourth plane's guns blinking red and he was shooting at Butch while our gunner, Ker-

Army to Probe Bolling Crash Fatal to Three

Major and 2 Civilians Killed as Bomber Plummets to Earth

Army authorities today will investigate the crash of a B-25 Mitchell bomber in which the pilot and two civilian passengers were killed at Bolling Field, D. C., yesterday noon. Returning from a test flight, the plane circled over the field before the crash, officers said.

The dead:

Maj. Robert W. Springer, 28, pilot of the plane, of 214 Portland st. se.

Marcellus F. Stuck, 30, civilian employe of the Army Air Forces at the subdepot of Bolling Field, of 434 Mellon st. se.

John F. Scotti, 31, employe in the flight test section, of 224 Buchanan st., Alexandria, Va.

All three were married.

Engineering officer at the subdepot, Major Springer had been stationed at Bolling Field since November, 1942. A native of Indianapolis, Ind., he joined the Army Air Forces in July, 1939, after graduation from Butler University. In addition to his wife, Phyllis, survivors are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Springer, and a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Halderman, all of Indianapolis, and brother, Sergt. Edward Springer, AUS.

Mr. Stuck, who was formerly in the production control center at Bolling Field, came here about two years ago. Previously he was stationed at Middletown, Pa. He was a native of Connellsville, Pa. Survivors include his wife, Opal, an employe at Lansburgh's; a son, Marcellus Stuck, jr.; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stuck, of Smithfield, Pa., and a sister, Mrs. Anna Jane Maline, of Appola, Pa.

A former car dealer in Brooklyn, N. Y., Mr. Scott was a native of that city. He had served for two years at Bolling Field. Surviving, in addition to his wife, are his mother, Mrs. Madeline Scotti, of Brooklyn; two sisters, Misses Rose and Josephine Scotti, and three brothers, Nicholas and Michael Scotti, employes of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and Michael, a seaman with the Navy.

Flu Attacks 90,000 Here In 2 Weeks

School Absences Show Increase; Epidemic Expected To Taper Off Soon

By Margaret Davis

While Health Officer George C. Ruhland reported an estimated 90,000 persons in the District have been attacked by influenza in the District since Thanksgiving absences in schools increased yesterday, but school statisticians were loath definitely to attribute the increase to flu.

Although additional cases are expected to occur over the weekend, Dr. Ruhland said late last night that "we may expect this to taper off in view of historical evidence."

Speaking to the community over the radio, through Station WRC, he said that indications were encouraging as to the termination of the epidemic. He said he saw no reason for closing schools.

Few Pneumonia Complications

Pneumonia complications are conspicuous by being few, he added, and said doctors were not sure whether this was because of the nature of the germ or because of present-day treatment.

In the 95 elementary schools, 14,762 pupils were absent yesterday for all causes out of a total enrollment of 52,312—about 2 per cent more than the day before and 18.2 per cent more than the average daily absence figure of 10 per cent. Statisticians pointed out, however, that elementary school absences always rise on rainy days.

It was noted that some elementary schools showed phenomenal absence lists. More than half the pupils was absent at Cranch School, 12th and G st. se., and at Benning School, Benning rd. and Minnesota ave. ne., and four other schools, Bancroft, Eaton, Lafayete, and Takoma, had more than 30 per cent absent.

However, statisticians said no localizing of the disease could be indicated by these figures, since some schools reporting excessive absences are in the same neighborhood with others whose figures were low.

Meanwhile, Dr. Carroll Reed, assistant superintendent in charge of elementary schools, said teacher absences were forcing officials to comb the town for substitutes and that many Teachers College girls were helping out. No doubling up has been necessary yet, he said. Teacher absences in the elementaries mounted to 159 yesterday, as against 150 for the day before. In the entire system, 271 out of 3200 teachers were absent yesterday.

Fewer Calls for Doctors

Elsewhere in the city the District Medical Bureau reported calls for doctors about the same since Monday—a little more than 200 calls daily since the peak of 400 calls handled Sunday.

Dr. Ruhland said that while some groups report the disease on the wane, others say there has been no change. Figures for the estimate of 90,000 cases in the city to date were made after sampling figures from schools, mercantile establishments and Government agencies, he said.

Harold Kinner, secretary of the

Reds Take Dnieper Junction But Again Lose in Kiev Area; Canadians Open Push in Italy

New Blow Aimed At Jolting Line In East; Yanks Isolate Mignano

By Noland Norgaard

Algiers, Dec. 10 (AP).—American and British troops in eight days of the bitterest fighting of the Italian campaign have isolated the German stronghold of Mignano, it was announced today, and now sit astride the main highway and railroad between that fortress and Cassino, 10 miles to the northwest.

Accompanying this smash, Canadians of the British Eighth Army, operating on the Adriatic coastal sector, opened a big assault apparently aimed at unhinging German defenses holding up Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's forces.

The Fifth Army's drive was brought to a smashing climax when American infantry in hand-to-hand fighting captured Mount Samucro on the northern side of the strategic valley above Mignano and other Allied units stabbed forward into the enemy's secondary defenses before Cassino.

These thrusts forced the last stubbornly-resisting Germans to withdraw from the immediate vicinity of Mignano, which had been a "no man's land" for a week as the Fifth Army smashed yard by yard through fortifications more formidable than those which stalled the Allies for five months in Tunisia.

Heavy Losses for Enemy

Latest reports showed that at least one enemy division—the Fifteenth Panzer Grenadiers—had suffered extremely heavy losses.

In the battle for 3000-foot Mount Samucro, American troops pressed up under cover of heavy clouds to within a few yards of the enemy before being discovered and with small arms and grenades wiped out the last German opposition.

From Mount Samucro the American positions overlooked the fortified villages of San Vittore and San Pietro, only six and seven miles, respectively, from Cassino.

Also captured in the final sweep of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's troops was Rocca d'Evandro, a strongly-defended village on the northwest slope of Mount Camino. The Allies now hold the entire eastern and southern bank of the Garigliano River from Rocca d'Evandro to its mouth, a distance of 14 airplane miles.

Canadians Open Up

The Canadian drive was a major assault against enemy defenses on the inland sector of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army front and were making good progress with armored support. At some points they ran into elaborate and recently constructed enemy defenses, but pressed ahead systematically.

The latest prisoners taken on the Fifth Army front were members of the Hermann Goering Division, which again had been put

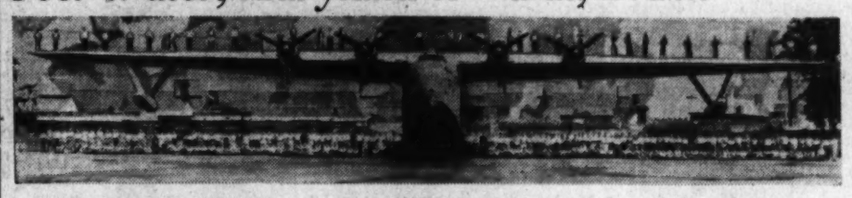
Flying Boat Mars Hops 4375 Nonstop Miles Over Water, Maryland to Natal, Brazil



The giant Mars, with men clustered like dwarfs atop and beneath her wing.

Flying nonstop from Patuxent River, Md., 4375 miles to Natal, Brazil, the Navy's huge new flying boat Mars has surpassed all existing records for overwater flight and air cargo transportation, Secretary Frank Knox announced yesterday.

Knox said the performance of the gigantic craft was so good it is likely that the Navy will order others to be built to help meet the ever-increasing need for fast cargo service.

In addition to the long overwater hop to Natal, the Mars set new records for air cargo—35,000 pounds—and for the heaviest load ever lifted by a plane—148,500 pounds gross at takeoff from Patuxent River.

On the flight to Natal, which the Navy said took 28 hours and 25 minutes, the Mars carried 13,000 pounds of Christmas mail for the armed forces. From Natal the more than half a million letters were carried to the Mediterranean war fronts in smaller cargo planes.

The Mars returned to Belem, Brazil, with 23,000 pounds of cargo; flew from Belem to Port of Spain; Trinidad, with 35,000 pounds, and from Port of Spain to Bermuda with 27,400 pounds. The cargo included war materials labeled "Priority A-1," which, the Navy said, "rides ahead of admirals." It traveled at an average speed of 161 miles an hour.

The Navy said the speed was far from maximum because minimum engine power was used to conserve the power plants, which are still experimental.

Znamenka Falls To Soviet Forces; Nazi Tanks Gain Near Korosten

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Russians announced today the capture of the heavily-fortified Ukrainian railway center of Znamenka and a continuing advance through blizzards in two directions in the Dnieper bend, but to the north the great German counterattack against the Kiev bulge, employing nearly 2000 tanks, rolled the Soviet defenders back to a point 30 miles east of Korosten.

Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin announced the capture of Znamenka after a three-day assault, and the Soviet communique later told of further advances to the north in the direction of Kirovograd and to the south toward Krivoi Rog.

But the communique for the first time mentioned the town of Malin, 60 miles west of Kiev, and said large forces of German infantry and tanks attacking south of this town were repulsed.

Ominous Indication

Malin is just south of the Korosten-Kiev Railway. If the Germans are to the south it indicates that the Kiev bulge, which once extended to Korosten and Zhitomir, has been considerably reduced.

The Russians apparently still had forces at Chernyakhov, their westernmost reach in this area some 80 miles west of Kiev but even this town was apparently outflanked for the Russians mentioned German counterattacks northeast of Chernyakhov in which 92 German tanks were wrecked in 24 hours fighting.

In the Dnieper bend the Russians, fighting through blizzards, entered Znamenka Thursday, after cutting three of its four railways and closing into the suburbs from the north, south and east.

Air-Borne Forces Aid

Continuing, they struck north to capture Kirovka on the junction of the Kirovograd Railway and south to Chabanovka, a 5-mile advance down the rail line toward the iron mine center of Krivoi Rog.

Troops led by Gen. Ivan S. Konev, conqueror of Kremenchug and Dnepropetrovsk, were aided by air-borne forces in an advance which appeared likely to hasten the crumbling of the entire Nazi middle Ukraine defenses.

Capture of Znamenka opened the way to the industrial city of Kirovograd, 20 miles to the southwest, the next objective of General Konev's army. His troops already were reported 15 miles east of Kirovograd, having pushed on three miles from Mederovo, which fell yesterday.

Had Been Key Point

Until the line running southward from Znamenka was cut a few days ago, the junction had served as a key point in the east-west communication for the German Dnieper bend forces. Although these forces hold the entire right bank of the lower Dnieper all the way to the manganese city of Nikopol, their land communications to the west have already been difficult because the chief highways and railways in this area run north and south.

A German radio announcement Thursday that the Russians of the Kremenchug and Cherkasy bridgeheads had joined forces.

New Instructions

By Ben W. Gilbert

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, last night breathed new meaning into the father draft measure which President Roosevelt approved earlier in the day by giving fathers employed in war production and war-supporting activities preferential status with respect to occupational deferment.

Designed originally to delay the induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, the measure was passed by both houses in a much-emasculated form, having little immediate effect upon father induction.

Hershey, in new instructions sent to local draft boards, directed that existing deferment regulations should be "liberally construed" with respect to fathers.

"Fathers who are eligible for occupational deferment under the provisions of local board memorandum No. 115 (authorizing draft boards to weight a man's replaceability) and who are making con-

Roosevelt Pays Visit to Malta En Route Back

Valletta, Malta, Dec. 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt made a dramatic three-hour appearance on this bomb-scarred little British island in the Mediterranean Wednesday and paid tribute to its heroic defenders with presentation of an illuminated scroll.

Traveling from the Middle East, the President dropped down in a four-engined Douglas C-54 transport plane at 9:50 in the morning, passed rapidly through a succession of ceremonies, and then, saying he had "many things to do," flew away.

(The Berlin radio said President Roosevelt might be headed for Spain to meet Generalissimo Franco, or to London. The President's movements as usual were secret, but Secretary of State Hull has reported in Washington that he did not know anything of such a meeting.)

In the ceremonies the President referred to Prime Minister Churchill, who had stopped at Malta earlier, and said, "I feel we have struck strong blows for the future of the human race."

Pledges Postwar Collaboration

He declared that, "The United States will proceed until the war is won, but more than that, we will stand shoulder to shoulder with the British Empire and our other Allies in making it a victory worth while."

The President presented a scroll on behalf of the American people saluting the defenders of Malta for "valorous service far above and beyond the call of duty" in the months of almost continual Axis bombardment.

The scroll will be cast in bronze on Valletta's main square.

New Britain Area Island Again Raided

Cape Gloucester Is Hit From Air Eleventh Straight Day

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Saturday), Dec. 11 (AP).—For the eleventh straight day, Cape Gloucester, in the New Britain area in greatest danger of invasion by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's New Guinea forces, has been pounded by Allied bombers.

Headquarters announced today that Mitchell medium bombers, which hit their targets from minimum altitude, delivered the latest attack in a series which have exploded approximately 1000 tons of bombs in that small area alone.

This aerial assault on enemy supplies was coordinated with naval action by PT boats which sank or set afire five barges in the New Guinea-New Britain sectors.

A spokesman said Australians who captured the jungle supply high point of Wareo on the Huon Peninsula of New Guinea still are progressing north of there.

The attack reported in the Cape Gloucester area was delivered by Thunderbolt-escorted Mitchells which scattered 48 tons of bombs along shore installations. They also strafed bivouacs, barge bases and supplies.

Bad weather virtually brought operations of Admiral William F. Halsey's Solomons air force to a halt.

RAF Bombers Roar Toward Germany

London (Saturday), Dec. 11 (AP).—A 45-minute procession of RAF bombers roared across the Straits of Dover in moonlight last night, and a continental radio blackout indicated that the week-long lull in the new aerial campaign to level Germany had ended.

Following the departure of the first procession of bombers, other planes were heard thundering out toward northern France as the skies cleared and presented good visibility for the first time in days.

Italian Soldiers Fighting Germans With Fifth Army

Algiers, Dec. 10 (AP).—Italian troops now are in action against the Germans in the Fifth Army sector of the Italian front, it was announced officially tonight.

The arrival of the Italians at the front beside the American and British soldiers under Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark implements Italy's status as a cobelligerent of the Allies and fulfills Marshal Pietro Badoglio's promise that the Italians would join in the fight to oust the Germans from Italy.

Censorship Rules Liberalized In Revised Press, Radio Code

By James F. King

In the interest of encouraging a more liberal presentation of war news, especially regarding war production, Merchant Marine operations and diplomatic negotiations not connected directly with military operations, the Office of Censorship yesterday announced liberalizing changes in voluntary censorship restrictions on the press and radio and assumed greater responsibility for clearing material for publication and broadcast.

Director Byron Price, who after nearly two years as chief censor contradicts almost all legends about censors by steadfastly working to reduce censorship, explained to a press and radio conference the changes made in revised press and radio censorship codes which become effective immediately.

"Heretofore," Price said, "the codes have requested that various kinds of information be withheld 'except when such information is made available for publication by appropriate authority.' The new edition says instead: 'except when such information is made available for publication by appropriate authority or is specifically cleared by the Office of Censorship.'

"This means, in effect, that the Office of Censorship will itself undertake to act as appropriate authority under the codes. The change underscores the fact that this agency was commissioned by the President to supervise voluntary censorship and to decide what press and radio should or should not be asked to withhold."

Price invited press and radio to appeal to the Office of Censorship when they receive requests for the withholding of news not in the restricted categories.

"Unquestionably news is being suppressed needlessly by newspapers and broadcasters because of miscellaneous requests emanating from totally unauthorized sources throughout the country, including even publicity agents and chambers of commerce," Price said.

Saying that he knew of a number of instances in which newspapers acceded to such unauthorized requests, Price added:

"I want to be sure that we don't build up that type of psychology. I want to put newspapers and broadcasters on their guard against it."

In reply to a question, Price said that regulations issued to public relations officials by their own agencies were not binding upon newspapers, and he emphasized that only restrictions set forth in the codes or a request by the Office of Censorship had such effect.

Price was asked whether any consideration had been given to termination of all censorship. He replied:

"There has been a great deal. I can express the personal hope that all censorship, not only press and radio, but also mail and cable, will end the minute the shooting

Van Nuys Sees Tax Maneuver As Way to Stop Liquor Racket

By Mary Spargo

The whisky black market can be smashed by next July with tax action to force billions of dollars worth of stock out of warehouses and WPB action to permit each distiller to manufacture beverage alcohol five days a month, it was claimed yesterday.

After hearing Treasury expert Stewart Berkshire give mouth-watering figures of 117 million gallons of 4-year-old and better whisky held in dim warehouses, Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana said firmly he was going to recommend just those actions to lift whisky supplies out of the hands of price racketeers.

The War Production Board would have to permit distillers to turn their energies to the cup that cheers five days a month, Van Nuys pointed out, but Congress itself can free an amount of whisky between January and July, 1944, that would provide better than a gallon for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Van Nuys revealed that Canadian distillers have gone on a rotating system permitting each distiller to turn his plants over for beverages every so often. He said it takes less than two hours to change over from the manufacture of industrial to beverage alcohol and requires no new materials.

As for those gallons stowed away in warehouses, only a stroke of the congressional pen is needed to free them, and when the necessary distilled water is added to convert them to the usual 86 proof whisky they will become 136 million gallons.

That is 644 million quarts, or 90 million quarts a month for the market from January to July.

Willkie Faces Senate Inquiry On 1940 Vote Purchase Charge

By International News Service

Wendell L. Willkie was slated last night for a grilling by a Senate Committee on his 1940 race for the Presidency, particularly on charges his forces tried to buy the Republican nomination for him.

Senator Theodore F. Green (Democrat) Rhode Island, chairman of the Committee on Elections and Privileges, appointed a subcommittee of five members to make the investigation. He acted on authority of a resolution introduced by Senator William D. Langer (Republican) North Dakota.

Named to make the inquiry were Senators Harley M. Kilgore of West Virginia, Tom Stewart of Tennessee, and James M. Tunnel of Delaware, all Democrats; Warren R. Austin of Vermont, and Styles bridges of New Hampshire, Republicans.

Langer said he would ask that Willkie be invited to testify, C. Nelson Sparks, former Mayor of Akron, Ohio, who made the charges that the nomination was "bought" by backers of Willkie, will be called to testify.

The North Dakotan also indicated he would insist that John Cowles, publisher and friend of Willkie, be invited to testify as well as Frank Gannett, publisher, who was an also-ran in the 1940 Republican Convention.

Sparks in his book said he had been told the Arizona Delegation to the GOP convention was offered $19,000 to support Willkie, and that similar approaches were made to other state delegations.

The three democrats having a majority on the subcommittee are all classified as stanch Administration supporters, although Stewart, it was noted, has made some speeches in the Senate critical of affairs on the home front.

Allied Planes Hit Bulgar Capital Hard

Nazis Pour In Men as Tito Strikes Back

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Germans were reported tonight to be reaching into their first line reserve troop pool to strengthen their Yugoslav offensive as Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) went over to the counterattack both along the Croatian coast and locally in Serbia, digging in to throw back Nazi thrusts in Bosnia.

These reinforcements reportedly represented some of the ablest units in the German army short of the elite divisions facing the Russians.

Yugoslavia, in the German mind, forms the most likely avenue for the heavy Allied assault "from the south" which President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill promised along with those from the west and east.

While Tito was reporting the recapture of the town of Bograd in Croatia, offensive thrusts against the Nazis in Serbia were costing the enemy "big losses" and were hacking against enemy-held railways.

RAF heavy bombers struck again along the Germans' right flank in the Balkans. The big Crete harbor of Herakleion was heavily hit and in attacks over the eastern Aegean several small enemy vessels were knocked out.

The Nazis were reported turning to terror in efforts to break Yugoslav resistance. Dispatches to the Swedish press said the German commander in Belgrade ordered the execution of 200 hostages for every German soldier killed on the field of battle.

Great Destruction Caused, Many Killed, Radio Says

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Bulgarian capital of Sofia was blasted for an hour and 45 minutes this afternoon by waves of Allied planes whose explosives caused great destruction and killed many persons, the Sofia radio disclosed tonight.

American planes apparently made the attack, and it was indicated that the target again was the railroad district which was hit so hard last November 24 by U. S. Liberators of the northwest African command.

The rail yards are a mile from Parliament, scene of fervid deliberations of political and military import following the tripower announcement at Teheran and the subsequent "closest unity" council among President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and the leaders of Turkey, neighbor of Bulgaria.

Premier Bobri Bojilov interrupted an address to Parliament at 5 p. m., asking his legislators to rise in silent tribute to those who had died, the Sofia radio said.

Besides the Liberator attack late last month, Mitchells had attacked the Capital on November 1. These bombings had been on a more or less experimental basis, but tonight's reports indicated that the war had come in full strength to Bulgaria—possibly as a result of the Teheran conference which foreshadowed actions to force Germany's satellites out of the war.

Satellites Squirm

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—Signs that Adolf Hitler's squirming satellites are seeking a way out of the war increased tonight as dispatches from neutral capitals pictured Bulgaria in the throes of a crisis and panicky Rumanians leaving cities in fear of air raids.

For the last two days there have been reports that the pro-German Bulgarian Premier, Dobri Bojilov, was struggling to patch up his shaky regime after a vote of no confidence. The Premier himself was said to be taking over the foreign office portfolio after the minister resigned.

Peace demonstrations were reported all over the country, and there were unconfirmed reports that general mobilization had been ordered.

Bulgaria's relations with Russia, with whom she is not at war—might provide an escape in spite of the fact that she is a co-belligerent with Germany against the United States and Britain.

Military experts think the pro-Russian Bulgarian soldiers might fight if the Turks invaded but would be unreliable and possibly mutinous if asked to fight the Russians.

The presence of German troops bolsters the pro-Nazi regime, but participation of Russian forces in an Allied invasion of the Balkans might touch off a revolt beyond German capacity to control.

Rumania is in the tightest spot of all the satellite states. After seeing much of her manpower slaughtered or captured in Russia, she faces the prospect of being overwhelmed by Russian forces.

Significantly the Bucharest radio has made broadcasts praising Woodrow Wilson as an inspirer of peace without vengeance after the last war—implying that the mercy of the victors is what Rumanians would like to be sure of now.

No Other General Slapped a Soldier, Committee Told

By the Associated Press

The War Department has reported to the Senate Military Committee that no other American general has been involved in a soldier-slapping incident similar to that for which Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., was rebuked.

There are no other incidents of this kind in Patton's record, the report added.

The committee requested the "full information" on the incident in which General Patton cuffed a soldier in a Sicilian hospital, was dressed down by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, then apologized to the man and to many members of his Seventh Army Command.

The full statement, it was learned yesterday, carries a general admission that it was a mistake for Eisenhower's headquarters to issue what looked like a denial of the Patton incident. It defended the action of the officers concerned, however, as having been taken "for the good of the service." Eisenhower himself later confirmed the story.

which appeared doubtful on its receipt, seemed even less credible today as the German high command in its communique described fighting in the two regions separately, treating them as usual as different actions.

The Germans told of a big new Soviet offensive in the Pripet-Berezina sector west of Gomel in White Russia, but the Russians were silent on this region.

Night Raiders Believed Over Reich Again

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—A Continental radio blackout indicated that heavy RAF bombers were out tonight to end the week-long lapse in the new Allied aerial campaign.

Nazi raiders, few in number, also gave London its first alert since December 1.

The Nazi radios, including Deutschlandsender, main Berlin station, began signing off around 7 p. m., after low-flying Mosquitoes had dealt stinging daylight blows to enemy transport facilities in northwest Germany. They peppered troops, railway junctions, trains, barges, tugboats, trucks, and planes. Two Mosquitoes were lost.

One pilot, following a road at about 30 feet above the ground, sent a cascade of deathly missiles into a column of German soldiers marching in double file, and some of the Nazis, he said, were blown as high as 20 feet into the air.

Only a few of the German raiders reached the London area during an alert which lasted less than an hour. Gunfire was heard blasting away at the attackers in outlying districts.

Preliminary reports indicated the enemy also was over scattered parts of southeast England and East Anglia. At least four of the German planes were shot down.

Meantime, the Air Ministry disclosed that plane production is now so great that RAF losses even at the exaggerated rate claimed by the Germans, would not halt the new Allied bombing offensive.

Troops Near, Benedictine Library Moved

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 10 (AP).—With Allied troops drawing near, the Swiss Telegraph Agency reported today the library and archives of the famous Benedictine Monastery had been removed from Mount Cassino for the first time in more than 10 centuries.

(German broadcasts said the German Hermann Goering Armored Division had "recovered" the treasures from Mount Cassino Monastery, atop a peak just northwest of Cassino, and "cermoniously handed them over to papal authorities.")

The Rome dispatch said the archives had been deposited in subterranean chambers of the Chateau Sant' Angelo. Sixty thousand volumes and records were removed from the monastery library, which is the property of the Italian state, it was said.

St. Benedict migrated to Mount Cassino in 529 A. D., and founded the monastery which became a center of Latin and Christian culture. It was sacked by the Lombards about 580 and destroyed by the Saracens in 884.

into the line there to replace the badly mauled Fifteenth Panzer Grenadiers.

The Allies' strategic air force was grounded because of bad weather, but the tactical force sent out a half-dozen different types of planes to bomb and strafe ships, bridges, highway intersections, troop concentrations and gun positions. Four Allied planes were missing from these extensive operations.

Briton Rates 2 U. S. Planes Among 3 'Most Outstanding'

New York, Dec. 10 (INS).—Peter Masefield, British aviation authority, today singled out two American planes and one of British make as the "three most outstanding aircraft in the world today."

The American planes are the North American Mustang (Merlin engine) single-seater fighter and the Consolidated Liberator day bomber. The British plane is the De Havilland Mosquito fighter-bomber.

"The Mustang is supreme, according to my estimation, in land-based single-seat fighter categories," he says. "The Mosquito supreme as a high-speed day-and-night bomber and reconnaissance airplane and also as a night intruder-fighter, while the Liberator leads both as a long-range day bomber and as an ocean patrol bomber."

Masefield says that with the Merlin engine, the Mustang's performance "is exceptional, both low down and at heights above 30,000 feet.

"Although the latest Airacobra is slightly faster at sea level, the Mustang makes up the leeway very rapidly and, at a few thousand feet, is ahead. Wing-mounted bomb racks give the Mustang a useful role as a fighter-bomber and also provides slings for long-range fuel tanks."

Masefield declares that the Mosquito and Liberator "also shine among the galaxy of fine aircraft; the Mosquito combing speed with a shattering weight of fire in its fighter form, and range and bomb load in its bomber version."

It is the speedy Mosquito, of streamlined plywood, that the Royal Air Force uses for its lightning hit-and-run jabs at Berlin.

The Liberator, according to Masefield, is now more thoroughly defended than any other day bomber. He says it "has a slight advantage in speed and load over the Fortress. Even so, the latest Fortress is a magnificent day bomber and stands up to punishment better than any other airplane of its size now flying."

Japs Made Tarawa Seem To Be Empty

By Eugene Burns

Aboard a U. S. Carrier off the Marshall Islands, Dec. 7 (Delayed) (AP).—Tarawa was Kiska in reverse. At Kiska the Japanese led us to believe they had plenty of strength, which they did not, and then scrammed. At Tarawa they made us believe they had little power, and their positions were doubly manned.

It also proves their ability to deceive.

Comdr. Paul E. Emrick, 33, of Butler, Pa., air group commander of a carrier who helped direct the Tarawa preinvasion softening-up, said:

"For two days I flew back and forth over a tiny Atoll and at 1000 feet combed it with my binoculars for Japs.

Antiaircraft "Pitiful"

"The Japs' antiaircraft was pitiful but occasionally a few batteries seemed to fire. My dive bombers took their own sweet time coming in for four runs to drop their 500 pounders which sent logs and coral flying. The destruction seemed utter; even every coconut tree was peeled."

Tarawa looked like another Kiska—and great optimism prevailed on our ship.

This writer covered the American reoccupation of Kiska, in the Aleutian Islands. Our forces had expected a fierce battle. Instead they found on landing that the enemy had abandoned the island.

Despite the fact that the Japanese had fled, they left the illusion of strength there. I saw new trenches appear in the Kiska hills a week before the Americans landed. New buildings seemed to spring out of the ground; even strange new antiaircraft batteries fired at U. S. planes.

Trick Stuff

However, upon landing it was apparent that the diminishing enemy garrison had run from one gun to another, had pulled the tundra off old buildings to make it appear they were newly erected. They had hauled lumber to higher ground and spread it out to make it look like the roofs of new buildings. They uncovered trenches.

At Kiska not one Japanese remained, but at Tarawa where it appeared there were few, there were many. The Marines at Tarawa were caught in a withering fire when they least expected it.

Flying Boat Mars Hops 4375 Miles

In addition, time was lost at all stops while the plane was tested for water-handling and landing and take-off qualities in restricted areas.

The Mars carried a crew of 16 commanded by Lieut. Comdr. William E. Coney. His first and second pilots were Lieuts. Joseph A. Baker and Kenneth W. Winsor. Lieut. (j.g.) Leon W. Shloss, USNR, of Washington, was security and liaison officer.

The plane's four Wright Cyclone engines deliver 2200 horse power each. It has a wing-span of 200 feet. The two-deck hull, which is 117 feet long, has the capacity of a 15-room house. It was built by the Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore and accepted by the Navy only a few days before its historic flight.

Chinese Fight to Expel Foe From Area North of Changteh

Chungking, Dec. 10 (AP).—Victorious Chinese soldiers fought on north of captured Changteh in the fertile farmland of northern Hunan Province today in a bid to clear the area of Japanese invaders, the Chinese high command announced.

The army said its forces had marched more than 13 miles to the northeast of the Yuan River port west of Tungting Lake and to the northwest had advanced 20 miles.

Here several hundred Japanese were killed and many taken captive, the Chinese said.

On the northern shore of the lake, Chinese battering at the Japanese defending Ansiang reported progress.

One Chinese spokesman said all Japanese troops south of the Yuan River had been driven across the stream. Predicting "important developments" within the next 48 hours, he asserted that if the main strength of the Japanese Third Division, now fighting northwest of Changteh, were destroyed "it would seal the fate of the Japanese forces in north Hunan."

The capture of Changteh yesterday climaxed a 40-day battle for the richest rice growing area in the province and cost the Japanese 40,000 casualties, Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng said. All but 300 men of the Chinese Fifty-seventh Division were reported wiped out. Tseng described the Changteh battle as the bitterest since the 1937 battle for Shanghai.

American and Chinese airmen of the United States Fourteenth Air Force aided in the victory by softening up Japanese positions without the loss of a single plane.

1944 Air Drive Against Japs Is Forecast

By the Associated Press

An air offensive against Japan next summer was forecast yesterday by an Army colonel, who also disclosed that the aerial operations against Germany now are actual preinvasion blows.

Writing in the "Military Review," official publication of the command and general staff school at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., Col. Ray W. Clifton referred to the classic "four phases" of strategic bombing, and said that "the bombing of German-occupied Europe can be considered in the third phase now."

"In the fourth phase," he added, "the air will paralyze the production and movement of enemy war supplies and support the ground forces making a landing."

Jap Air Strength Cut

In the Pacific, said Clifton, the increasing pace of the air war has cut into Japanese air strength, and hampered the movement of enemy supplies and reinforcements. Nine-tenths of the Japanese military facilities in Burma are reported damaged by Allied air attacks, and shipping at Rangoon has been so disrupted that supplies entering that port "are far below the level required to maintain the Japanese properly in Burma."

"The Japanese apparently are quite concerned over their airplane losses," Clifton wrote, "as it has been announced in Japan that production of machine tools for aircraft production has been given top priority.

"Also, possibly Japan is concerned about the air offensive which we will conduct against them next summer."

He did not elaborate on this highly significant statement.

(The Berlin radio broadcast today that American fliers in China had received orders to bomb the Japanese mainland and communications between Japan and the mainland of China. This was attributed to a spokesman at Japanese headquarters in China, who was quoted also as saying that "the situation in China has become more confused and more serious, and therefore is receiving greater attention."

Tallest Jap Claim Yet Has New USS Wisconsin Sunk

New York, Dec. 10 (INS).—The Japanese naval propagandist came through today with his masterpiece—he destroyed a ship that wasn't even commissioned.

He claimed the brand-new U. S. battleship Wisconsin was sunk "in one of the biggest sea battles off Bougainville."

The Wisconsin was launched at Philadelphia last Monday. It has yet to be commissioned into service.

DNB, the German agency, quoted the latest pipedream from Tokyo's super imaginist.

O'Hare Shot Down In Pacific Fight

nan, was shooting at the Jap.

"I overheard Kernan tell Commander Phillips that he was opening fire and Phil in turn told Butch, 'Butch, there's a Jap plane coming into your tail.

"Then Butch's lights went off. I looked again and he was gone."

Butch landed at Tarawa, for the first carrier plane landing there since American conquest of the Gilbert Islands, to study the field. He also had a personal interest because he had "hellcatted" that area before and during the landing operations at Makin and Tarawa.

Since dawn of November 27 a relentless search for him has been conducted by carrier groups and by planes from Tarawa. The search allows for a 20-mile drift due to the heavy Gilbert currents. An area of 2,000 square miles has been crisscrossed, boxed and scouted.

Oil slicks and jetsam from enemy planes and a blue-gray overturned Japanese liferaft were found by Acting Torpedo Plane Squadron Commander Bill Privette of Chapel Hill, N. C.

The reconstructed story of the men who flew with O'Hare, indicated that the lieutenant commander took one Jap torpedo plane down with him. It was his ninth.

Commenting on the action, Rear Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander of the task force, said:

"Butch, with accompanying planes, saved my formation from certain torpedo hits. I am recommending him for a second Congressional Medal of Honor."

As I write on Lieutenant Commander O'Hare's ready room typewriter, an aviator drifts in and sits down, avoiding his comfortable black leather, reclining chair. The aviator stares dead ahead.

Without introducing the subject, he says:

"Despite our great engines of destruction, enormous tanks, guns of battleships and carriers—it remains that one determined man can settle a battle." He meant Butch's leadership in repelling the attack.

Butch O'Hare's aide, Lieut. Wallace M. Parker of Pittsburgh, Pa., add: "Butch did it twice."

O'Hare was awarded a Congressional Metal of Honor for shooting down five Japanese planes, single handed, which attempted to attack the aircraft carrier Lexington in the South Seas in 1942.

4 Area Fliers Win Medals For Heroism

Roosevelt Glimpses African Battlefields

War Sidelights

Churchill Continues Conferences

Cairo, Dec. 10 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill is still in Cairo, conferring with Middle East officials in what is believed to be a survey of the entire Middle Eastern situation in the light of decisions reached at the recent Turkish conferences.

The British Prime Minister, whose whereabouts had been unreported since shortly after he and President Roosevelt ended their talks with Turkish President Ismet Inonu December 6, gave a 40-minute off-the-record talk to war correspondents today.

He has conferred with King Farouk of Egypt, King George of Greece, and various Britons, including Richard Gardiner Casey, Minister of State in the Middle East; Lord Killearn, Ambassador to Egypt; Maj. Gen. Sir Edward Louis Spears, Minister to Syria and Lebanon, and Harold MacMillan, Minister to North Africa.

Fantastic Tales

Stockholm, Dec. 10 (AP).—Fantastic tales now circulating in Germany are contributing to the undermining of German morale, the Bern correspondent of Svenska Dagbladet reported today.

One German industrialist told a neutral he knew the United States is producing 25,000 planes a month, instead of the announced total of less than 9000, the correspondent reported.

The industrialist also was said to have asserted that America had enough gas and bombs on hand to destroy Germany in two weeks if Germany tried to use her "secret weapon."

Finns Denounced

Moscow, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Soviet press kept up its denunciation of the Finns today following upon widespread accounts of how the Finns and Germans are shelling Leningrad.

The newspapers accused the Finns of torturing and badly feeding Russian prisoners.

President's Plane Dips Low on Way From Middle East

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt, journeying homeward from his momentous conferences in the Middle East, flew over the battlefields of North Africa from El Alamein to Tunis, the White House disclosed last night.

At times he flew very low over the bomb-gouged sands, where last year's great battles raged, to get a fleeting close-up view.

The trip, from Cairo to Tunis, apparently preceded his Wednesday visit to Malta.

The story of the airplane flight was written by Maj. George F. Durno, a member of the President's party and a former White House correspondent.

He mentioned that the desert panorama which flowed beneath the President's plane gave the Chief Executive a graphic impression of the struggle put up by the British, Australian and New Zealand troops who turned back Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel.

The President commented on the fortitude and determination of those fighters who battled across so great an area of sand and waste.

"Somebody seems to have been doing a rather grand job," he was quoted as saying.

Spanish Envoy's Kin Indicted

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Carlos Vejarano y Cassina, described by FBI agents as a cousin of the Duke of Alba, Spanish Ambassador to Great Britain, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury on a charge of having acted as an unregistered agent for the German government.

Vejarano, who was arrested last Saturday at his home by FBI agents, was charged in the indictment with being an unregistered foreign agent from November 22, 1940, to January 20, 1941. Vejarano was said by the FBI to have been know in New York and Hollywood society as Count Nava-De Tajo.

District Man Dies in Action; 3 Wounded

One Washington man has been killed in action and three in the Washington area have been wounded, the War Department announced yesterday.

SAGER

Staff Sergt. Granville R. Brown, 3822 25th pl. ne., was killed in action in Europe, and Pvt. Nathan Rubenstein, 119 blnstein, 119 nw., Lieut. Philip A. Sager, jr., 813 Tewkesbury pl. nw., and Pvt. Robert E. Lee, 914 Grandin ave., Rockville, Md., were wounded while serving in the Mediterranean combat zone according to the announcement.

Staff Sergt. Brown, 23, who was reported missing in action over Germany following the Schweinfurt raid, was an assistant aerial engineer on a B-17. Born in Baltimore, he lived in the District most of his life and was graduated from McKinley High School. A member of the National Guard, where he was in charge of the supply room, he joined the Army in 1941 when the Guard was mustered into service.

LEE

Was at Franklin U.

Private Rubinstein, 19, was attending Benjamin Franklin University on a scholarship when he was inducted into the Army last February. The only son of Mrs. Rebecca Rubinstein of the Ingraham street address, he is a native of Washington and a graduate of Roosevelt High School.

Lieutenant Sager, 24, the pilot of a Lightning P-38, is now at Walter Reed Hospital recovering from wounds he received last August when shot down during a raid on Naples. Captured at that time, he was in Italian hands until freed by American forces in Italy.

Has Never Seen Daughter

A letter from Private Lee informing his wife, Mrs. Virty C. Lee of Rockville, that he had been wounded in action on October 27, arrived two hours before the War Department telegram. Slightly injured during an engagement in Italy, he has since rejoined his outfit.

Also listed as wounded in action in the Mediterranean theater are Pvt. Claude E. Hall, Ellicott City, Md.; Pvt. James H. Milburn, Tall Timbers, Md.; Pvt. Leonard M. Thompson, Catonsville, Md., and Pvt. Paul M. Glascock, Marshall, Va.

Marine Who Saved Life by Playing Dead to Wed His Nurse

New York, Dec. 10 (INS).—A "dead" Marine is going to get married.

His name is Private Jimmy Hall. He's 21, Irish and he's come back from hell to find romance in a naval hospital.

With his life blood running out of him in the steaming jungle of Guadalcanal this kid played dead one gory August morning in '42 while the Japs rolled his tired body around to strip him of a rifle and a watch, and left him there.

He knew what the Japs do to wounded Marines. So, his legs and back aflame from shrapnel, tortured by thirst, he lay for 50 hours in a foxhole while the Japs roamed all around him.

Now he's going to marry his nurse. He met her when they took him to St. Albans naval hospital on Long Island last April. Her name is Ensign Elsie Terhune of the Navy Nurse Corps. She's red-haired and the glow of honest admiration for a real man lights her laughing Irish eyes.

With First Wave

Jimmy landed with the Marine raiders, first wave, on Tulagi Island off Guadalcanal in August, 1942. He was wounded that very afternoon when he crawled out under machinegun fire to drag a wounded lieutenant back to safety.

"He was a swell guy," recalled Jimmy. "He and three other Marines went over a seawall to kayo a machinegun nest and they got it. I got over the wall and dragged him in."

Later, on Henderson Field, a mortar shell hit Hall on the hip, blew him 20 feet into the air and left him partially paralyzed. It was there that August dawn the Japs found him.

"First I thought they were Marine corpsmen," said Jimmy, "but then when they came nearer I could smell them and I knew they were Japs. One of them rolled me over. I stiffened, stopped breathing and kept my eyes closed very tight. He ripped off my wrist watch and then yanked my gun from around my neck.

"I thought, 'this was it' but finally they went away. For the next two days after I crawled into a hole they roamed around but never again touched me. I thought sure I'd die there, then two Marine paratroopers happened along and found me. I'm one in a million to be alive."

Censorship Rules Are Liberalized

ends. I think the trend should be downward from now on."

Principal code changes are:

Permit publication of Nation-wide summaries of war production, plant details and capacity, and movements of lend-lease material, because, said Price, "war production in general has now reached so great a volume that there is no need to hide it under a bushel."

Remove restrictions concerning resettlement centers and location of war prisoner camps, and recognizes the FBI as well as the War Department as appropriate authority for news of escaped prisoners.

Eliminate restrictions against unit identifications for servicemen on duty within the United States, although the code still bars publication of identifications of those overseas and on ships.

Make both the Navy and the War Shipping Administration appropriate authority for information concerning the movements, sinking or damaging of merchant vessels in any waters. Eliminating the language making the Navy the only appropriate authority, the Office of Censorship explained, "will allow the story of the vital and heroic part of the Merchant Marine in winning the war to be told more fully by the War Shipping Administration."

Restrictions on reports concerning forest fires are also removed.

Congress Completes Landing Craft Action

Congressional action was completed yesterday on a $5,300,000,000 measure authorizing construction of approximately 3,500,000 tons of landing craft and fleet auxiliary vessels.

In another action a measure authorizing construction of naval fleet and aviation facilities at an estimated cost of 235 million dollars was passed by the House without a dissenting vote.

Park Police Net $4000 Following 209 Arrests

A total of 209 motorists were arrested by the U. S. Park Police last month for violation of the speed laws and paid about $4000 in fines and forfeitures, Irving C. Root, parks superintendent, announced yesterday.

Root also said that the police would continue their antiviolation campaign and urged compliance of motorists "in the interest of public safety and the conservation of motor fuel and tires."

Roosevelt Pays Visit to Malta

by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Harry Hopkins, Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's Chief of Staff; Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the Northwest African Air Forces; Rear Admiral Ross McIntire, the President's personal physician; Maj. Gen. Walter Smith, Eisenhower's Chief of Staff; Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, the President's secretary and military aide, and Maj. John Boettiger, the President's son-in-law.

The plane, handled by Maj. John Bryan, the President's personal pilot, was escorted by a score of Lightning and Spitfire fighters.

They were welcomed by Field Marshal Lord Gort, commander in chief of Malta; a delegation of officials, a military guard of honor and a band.

With Lord Gort the President stepped from his plane into a jeep named "Husky," one of three presented to the British on Malta by Eisenhower when Sicily was invaded, and was driven to the front of the Guard of Honor made up from men of an RAF unit, 50 British marines, 50 Royal Navy men and 100 Maltese troops.

As the jeep came to a stop, the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner." The President took the salute, and then the American Flag was raised on the staff behind the guard.

The President read the inscription on the scroll, which he took from a handsome wooden case:

"In the name of the people of the United States of America I salute the island of Malta and its people and its defenders, who, in the cause of freedom and justice and decency throughout the world, have rendered valorous service far above and beyond the call of duty.

Praises Isle's Heroic Stand

"Under repeated fire from the skies, Malta stood alone and unafraid in the center of the sea, one tiny bright flame in the darkness, a beacon of hope in the clearer days which have come.

"Malta's bright story of human fortitude and courage will be read by posterity with wonder and gratitude through all the ages.

"What was done on this island maintains all the highest traditions of gallant men and women who from the beginning of time have lived and died to preserve civilization for all mankind.

"Signed

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT,
"President.

"December 7, 1943."

The President had dated the scroll December 7, the day before his visit, because it was the second anniversary of America's entry into the war.

Announcement of the President's visit to Malta was the first disclosure of his activities since he and Churchill conferred with President Ismet Inonu of Turkey at Cairo December 4-6.

Adamic's Book Deleted for Navy, Knox Reveals

Navy Secretary Knox was asked at his press conference yesterday about published reports that the Navy had approved for shipment to American servicemen overseas a special pocket edition of Louis Adamic's "The Native's Return" in which the author is said to pledge his support to an expected leftist revolution in the United States.

Knox exhibited several copies of the book, and pointed out that in later editions, which are being sent to servicemen, the author has deleted the passages to which the published reports had referred. "I don't know whether he changed his mind about the revolution but those five pages were left out," Knox said.

The Secretary then explained that the books which are selected for servicemen under this plan are chosen by a committee composed of well-known American authors, critics and library officials.

Soldier Vote States' Right Bypass Drafted

By Robert C. Albright

A compromise formula that would give nearly every overseas soldier a voting chance without any Federal collision with States' rights will be submitted next week to a sharply divided House Elections Committee.

The new soldier vote plan, still in the rough, was outlined to newsmen by Chairman Eugene Worley (Democrat), of Texas, following conferences with House Majority Leader McCormack and Majority Whip Ramspeck.

Briefly, the proposal is to remove any Federal compulsion on the States. Federal war ballots would be carried to overseas servicemen by the Army and Navy and voted for President, Vice President, Senator and Congressman. These would be delivered to State voting officials. The States could count them or not.

Not Remotest Invasion

Representative Ramspeck, a Georgian, said there was little doubt Federal soldiers' ballots would be counted along with State ballots once the factor of Federal compulsion, which has stirred up a beehive of States' rights opposition, has been removed. Under the compromise, Ramspeck said, there would not be the remotest invasion of States' rights.

Only extreme opponents of any Federal soldier ballot legislation expressed immediate opposition to the plan. Some members of the House Elections Committee, aligned nearly two to one against the original Federal ballot bill, were reported to be wavering. A shift of two Republican committee votes, it was learned, would send the legislation to the House floor.

But this or any other compromise obviously faced rough going in the House. Sectional feeling, which cut deep in the Senate, after intra-party attacks on the Senate States' right stand, flared all this week in Southern Democratic third party warnings. Leaders admitted this has slowed prospects of an early agreement, but felt confident Congress ultimately would approve a workable soldiers' vote bill.

Unwilling to accept any compromise was Representative John Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi, author of the House counterpart to the Senate-passed Eastland, McKellar-McClellan substitute. This would simply "recommend" that the States facilitate their own absentee balloting machinery. To do so in time for the next election would involve sweeping and concerted action by State legislatures.

But Rankin insisted the States could work out the soldiers' vote without Federal guidance. He objected to the compromise "because I don't want the Federal Government even sticking its little finger in."

Printing Solved

Worley, a Texas States' right Democrat, denied there was any States' rights issue in the compromise. He was reported considering even the elimination of the bipartisan Federal War Ballots Commission. Under his present bill the commission would have no political function, merely printing the ballots blueprinted by Congress, and clearing them.

But since the commission attracted heavy Republican fire in the Senate, Ramspeck has recommended that it be eliminated as unnecessary. The Majority Whip said the Army and Navy could handle the printing, in addition to seeing to it that the ballots are delivered to the soldiers and returned.

Congress meanwhile was swamped with mail demanding effective soldier vote legislation. Members of the elections committee which received the bulk of the letters, said the mail was particularly heavy from New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, but included many from other sections and direct appeals from soldiers.

Japs Report Wakasugi Dead

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Japanese Domei Agency broadcast that Kaname Wakasugi, former Japanese Minister to Washington, died today from "inflammation of the gall bladder."

Wakasugi was described as Japanese consul at Los Angeles in 1923 and consul-general at San Francisco in 1930. After holding several posts in China, he became consul-general in New York in 1936 and later, as Domei put it, "played an active role" in the "negotiations" directed by Ambassadors Kichiasaburo Nomura and Saburo Kurusu in 1941 while the Japanese were preparing their Pearl Harbor Attack.

Senators Raise Discharge Pay Ceiling to $500

Mustering out payments to servicemen, ranging all the way from $200 for men in the service in this country for less than a year to $500 for those more than 18 months overseas, yesterday were approved by the Senate Military Committee.

The discharge payments, recommended by the President, would become available in three monthly installments immediately after their honorable discharge or relief from active duty.

To prevent discrimination against men who continue in the armed forces after cessation of hostilities, or any rush to get out to claim the pay, the committee approved similar payments to those who remain in the armed branches.

Bill Introduced by Barkley

Action came on a bill introduced by Senate Majority Leader Barkley. This was amended to include pay scale provisions of the Bridges-Austin bill and technical changes recommended by the armed services.

Contrasting with the flat $60 discharge pay given soldiers after World War I, the graduated range of mustering out payments follows:

Service overseas 18 months or more—$500.

Service overseas for 12 to 18 months—$400.

Service overseas for less than 12 months—$300.

Service in continental United States for more than a year—$300.

Service in the United States for less than a year—$200.

All members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard and their respective components are included in the bill up to and including the rank of colonel or equivalent. The payments would be tax-exempt.

Estimates of cost ranged beyond 3½ billion dollars, the ultimate cost depending on the length of the war and other factors.

Amendments to the bill provided that mustering-out payments could be made only once to a serviceman. This was to prevent dual or even triple payments in some cases of reenlistment, or where soldiers were mustered out as enlisted men to accept a commission.

The mustering-out grant would be withheld from servicemen discharged under "dishonorable conditions."

U. S. Is Haven For 580,000 War Refugees

By the Associated Press

The United States has given haven to 580,000 refugee Europeans since Hitler mounted his campaign of intolerance, and American gates are still open to any who escape the Nazis, it was revealed yesterday.

Assistant Secretary of State Breckenridge Long appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in closed session November 26 on a resolution urging President Roosevelt to create a commission to work out a way of saving the Jewish people of Europe from Nazi extermination. The resolution is still before the committee.

All Neutrals Cooperate

He disclosed that all the neutral countries of Europe have cooperated in forging for refugees a "way out" of the inferno Hitler has made of their homelands.

About 30,000 people have come through Spain, Long said, and all but 1200 have been moved along to other places where better food and shelter is available.

Just after the Nazi flood into all of France, touched off by the American invasion of North Africa, Spain sent troops to her northern border to prevent the new exodus of refugees.

The United States immediately took the matter up in Madrid and in three days Spain reopened her frontier to the march of Europe's homeless.

60,000 in Switzerland

Switzerland, Long said, has taken in 60,000 refugees. Since they constitute a heavy drain on that isolated neutral's restricted supplies, the United States is considering "an allowance to the Swiss economy in order that she may be able to feed these people."

The main barrier to further movement of the hounded peoples of Europe into this country is transportation, Long revealed, adding that immigration quotas have not been filled.

Van Nuys Fires At Liquor Racket

proposal to tax distillers when whisky becomes 4 years old instead of when it becomes 8 years old, a move which would make it distinctly unprofitable to hold liquor for a higher price. Distillers would still hold the liquor if they wanted to but they woud have such a tremendous investment that holding of large stocks would be unlikely.

The House has already agreed to raise the tax per gallon on whisky from $6 to $9. If the Senate agrees, Uncle Sam's two-billion dollar revenue bill would be upped by more than a billion.

Berkshire pointed out that whether the whisky was taxed at four years or eight, the Government would eventually get that billion-odd.

Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan caught that one on the run.

"How about the leakage, outage or evaporation or whatever you call it between four years and eight? Doesn't that cut down the number of gallons and leave less to be taxed?"

Perfectly Potable

The deputy commissioner of Internal Revenue agreed to that conclusion. Van Nuys has previously asserted that 4-year-old liquor is perfectly potable, leaving the inference that allowing gallons upon gallons of it to evaporate in time of shortage is thoughtless, to say the least.

It's the shortage that causes the black market, Berkshire told the committee. He traced the fault right to the wholesalers and distillers. Avoiding dealing with their regular customers at ceiling prices, some of the wholesalers are enlisting new trade which will pay more than the ceilings, he said.

They are hard to catch, the Treasury's liquor watch dog mourned.

They take checks for the proper amount but get some additional on the side. To get a case you have to prove the cash transaction. Nevertheless some are being haled into court.

Although distillers have been claiming that WPB's action in limiting the manufacture of bottles to 65 per cent of the average 1942 production cut down the supply, Berkshire didn't agree.

The limitation, he pointed out was based on the number, not the size of bottles.

"There is nothing to prevent the liquor industry from taking all its quota in quart bottles," Berkshire said.

"Instead of that," commented Ferguson, "the shift has been from quarts to fifth-gallons."

Four Big Companies

Four companies, it was disclosed, produce nearly 60 per cent of all the whisky in the United States. These are the National Distilling Products Corp., Schenley Distilling Corp., Seagram's Distillers Corp. and Hiram Walker-Gooderham & Worts, the last two Canadian.

Berkshire was questioned as to whether action of distillers in deciding to ration their supplies to carry through the war did not violate the monopoly laws. He was also questioned as to whether the subsidiaries of these companies, which numbered 30 in one case, were not monopolistic. He said he did not think so.

Van Nuys protested the buying of wineries and breweries by the distillers. He asked if it was "a concerted move to monopolize the production of all alcoholic beverages including whisky, wine and beer." The Indiana Senator charged that the action of Seagram in financing a liquor wholesaler who in turn financed a liquor retailer was "a conspiracy." Berkshire said he had not inquired into the subject of monopolies in the liquor business.

Unfit for Army

Rejected Butter Going To Civilians

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).- More than 500,000 pounds of Argentine butter received here by the Commodity Credit Corporation has been found unsatisfactory for Government use, a CCC official said and is being sold for civilian use.

J. R. Rea, chief of the CCC's fats and oils section, said 195,776 pounds already have been marketed privately and that the rest of the shipment is expected to be offered to civilian users soon.

The Army, Navy, lend-lease and other priority groups rejected the butter, the official stated, because it graded only 89 score and was unsalted and therefore difficult to keep or reship overseas.

An official grading report characterized it as having a "barnyard flavor."

Rea said Army and lend-lease specifications called for salted butter of 90 score or better. (The lowest passing score for edible butter is 89.)

The Argentine butter was purchased by the British Purchasing Commission and allocated to the CCC under a United States and British agreement regulating dealings with the South American country, Rea said.

Commenting on reports of dissatisfaction among New York dealers over the manner in which the first part of the shipment was sold, REA declared the criticism was unjustified, adding:

"After all, we're not in the butter business. What we did was to take a telephone book and look up the names and addresses of some butter dealers. We sent them notices of the sale and invited them to submit bids. We received twelve bids and divided the offering among ten buyers, all of whom bid the ceiling price of 41 cents a pound."

Plants Told To Get Cafes

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, yesterday called on the management of war industries to provide or improve in-plant feeding facilities for their workers and gave the WPB's Office of Civilian Requirements and Office of Labor Production specific responsibilities to aid in getting the necessary equipment.

The two WPB offices were told to help maintain the highest productive efficiency of warworkers by making available sufficient supplies, facilities and services and, in co-operation with the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration, sufficient food for industrial feeding.

"One of the most efficient ways to improve the nutrition of civilian warworkers," Nelson said, "is in-plant feeding . . . The need for such service has rapidly increased . . . Millions of American warworkers must look to plant canteens or cafeterias to obtain the warm and substantial midshift meals they must have to sustain the physical effort required in war industry."

Nelson said that the Office of Civilian Requirements headed by Arthur D. Whiteside will determine minimum requirements for industrial feeding and the order of relative urgency, act as claimant agency to secure materials for the construction of equipping of needed facilities and help initiate and administer necessary regulations.

The Office of Labor Production, headed by Joseph D. Keenan, will determine, in cooperation with WPB industry divisions, the need for industrial feeding in individual plants and certify the degree of urgency in each plant. It will also help bring the need for such feeding programs to the attention of managements of such plants and seek the assistance of labor groups in making them most effective.

Court Relieves Ex-Gov. Hobby of $32,557 Tax Claim

By the Associated Press

The Federal Tax Court has ruled that W. P. Hobby, former Governor of Texas and husband of Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, head of the WACS, will not have to pay $32,557.90 in 1939 income taxes which the Bureau of Internal Revenue claimed he owed, although four judges filed dissenting opinions.

The decision, handed down by Judge J. M. Sternhagen, held that money derived by Hobby from four sales of stock in the Enterprise Company of Beaumont, Tex., was taxable as long term gains. The internal revenue commissioner had held that the money Hobby received for the stock, less its cost, constituted gains from partial liquidation taxable at a higher rate as a short term capital gain.

Renegotiations Bill Liberalized By Senators

By Samuel W. Bell
New York Tribune, Inc.

The Senate Finance Committee approved yesterday several major changes in the House version of the proposed revision of the War Contracts Renegotiation Act, all liberalizing to some extent the burden alleged to have been placed on contractors by the procedure now followed by Federal agencies charged with renegotiations.

However, the finance group made slow progress with the pending tax bill, now cut back to $1,922,700,000 as the result of the committee's action to date, when compared with the $2,140,000,000 bill passed by the House.

Moreover, the committee still has to face the prospect of determining whether to seek more revenue and still get revenue legislation enacted before January 1—a decision now delayed until next week. In House quarters the view was expressed that if the bill's total did not exceed two billion dollars, it might be better to postpone tax legislation until next year.

In a move interpreted as a decision by the Finance Committee to approve the House provision for an over-all board to carry out the renegotiation authority, committee members decided to add a representative of the War Production Board. As provided for in the House bill the War Contracts Price Adjustment Board so-called, would be composed of one representative each from the Treasury, War and Navy Departments, the Maritime Commission and the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

The committee also approved two exemptions from renegotiation of contracts by the Government—First, in the case of a "construction" contract let as the result of competitive bidding, and, second contracts for furnishing articles ordered to be furnished by a directive of the WPB at prices below the OPA ceiling.

A new section was written into the House bill requiring the renegotiation authority to give consideration, in computing excess profits taxes, to the financial problems in connection with reconversion to peacetime production.

The committee also amended the House version of the bill to make sure that, in the renegotiation of any particular contract, all deductions allowable in computing income and excess profits taxes are recognized except in the case of fees paid "commission brokers."

Compromise on Subsidy Plan Being Worked On at Capitol

By Christine Sadler

Although a plan to delay the subsidy vote until after February 1 was being pushed on Capitol Hill, some members of the Senate Banking Committee yesterday believed they could report out a compromise bill by Wednesday and congressional action could be completed before the Christmas holidays.

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio said when the committee met Monday he would offer a substitute for the Bankhead bill which would stop most food subsidy payments December 31 and attempt to tie subsidies to support prices guaranteed farmers.

His proposal would limit subsidy expenditure to 700 million dollars annually, he disclosed, and specifically prohibit payments to finance retail price rollbacks. He said the support price structure was essential to 1944 production and that he had no objection to the Government taking "necessary losses" in putting it into effect.

"It is highly desirable," he said, "to say to farmers now, when they are planning their production programs, 'Here is what you can expect in 1944.'"

House-passed legislation now before the committee would permit such "production subsidies" on oil crops and gives the War Food Administration permission to sell perishable fruits and vegetables at a loss to prevent spoilage. The Commodity Credit Corp. is granted no additional funds for such transactions, however, although the Bankhead bill would grant it 250 million dollars.

Senator Maybank (Democrat) of South Carolina declared he did not believe subsidy action could be completed before Christmas, "although we certainly intend to try."

He declared he favored writing compromise provisions into the Bankhead bill and said he was hopeful "something can be worked out acceptable to both War Food Administrator Marvin Jones and to us."

"But there is the tax bill for the Senate to consider and the calendar shows we are working against very little time," he said.

Meantime, Fred M. Vinson, Director of Economic Stabilization, ordered an overhaul of the national farm wage and salary structure to make Jones overseer of wages under $5000 annually.

The order, in certain instances, permits farm-wage increases up to $2400 a year without WFA approval. In all cases where wages have not been specifically fixed by Jones, employers are authorized to increase present wages up to the $2400 without approval of stabilization authorities.

Vinson said provisions of the national wage freeze order will continue to apply to farm wages in excess of $2400 until Jones fixes specific wage schedules. Reductions below the highest level for any type of work between January 1, 1942, and September 15, 1942, were prohibited.

Ration Tokens Due on Feb. 27

Starting February 27, Americans will be carrying vulcanized fiber tokens smaller than a dime to pay the ration-point charges on processed food and meats, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

Manufacture of two billion ration tokens was started this week by the Osborne Register Co., Cincinnati, O., OPA said. Originally, it was planned to make 1.1 billion quarter-size tokens.

The tokens—to be worth a point each—will be given housewives in change for ration stamps which will be worth 10 points each, instead of varying amounts as at present. Stamps worth 50 points will be provided each month for processed foods, with 30 meat points made available every two weeks, compared to the present rate of 48 processed food points a month, and 16 meat points a week.

Gaylord Elected NAM President; Sloan Urges Widening Job Opportunities

New Yorw, Dec. 10 (AP).—Machine tool maker Robert M. Gaylord, whose postwar plan is "work hard and save money," was elected president of the National Association of Manufacturers today.

Gaylord is president of the Ingersoll Milling Machine Co. of Rockford, Ill. He succeeds Frederick C. Crawford, president of Thompson Products, Inc., of Cleveland, who becomes chairman of the big association of industrialists.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corp., tonight challenged industrialists to prepare aggressively for widening job opportunities and " a dynamic and expanding economy, with high standards of living" in the postwar period.

"These are objectives which may well challenge the imagination of every individual in the country," he said in a prepared address at the manufacturers' convention.

Sloan asked the business leaders if they believed in the importance of such a challenge, were willing to take the risk and considered it worth while, or would they weakly adopt a policy of "let nature take its course?"

Will Look to Government

"We must develop new things to produce," Sloan said. "We must produce existing things at lower prices. If we do not, there are certain to be fewer instead of more jobs available as the years go by. This must not happen.

"If it should, our people, having in mind their war experience of high employment, generous payrolls and other manifest benefits, will demand of Government through political action what they cannot obtain through private enterprise.

Sloan suggested price controls be continued for a limited time after the war until Americans could establish an "equilibrium between goods available and purchasing power." He added such controls should be removed at the earliest possible date.

Biddle Declines To Be Candidate

The New Deal wing of the Democratic Party, casting about for a strong candidate to wrest the seat of Senator John J. Davis of Pennsylvania from the Republican Party in 1944, has offered the nomination to Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., but Biddle, within the last 12 hours, has declined to run, it was learned last night.

Army Report

How strong is the enemy? How tough is the job ahead? The answer is in part political, in part military. And in so far as the problem is military the War Department has prepared a sobering, forthright answer to these questions in the form of a short motion picture titled "War Department Report." It had its premiere at the National Press Club on the anniversary of Pearl Harbor and will be shown to some 10 million warworkers in factories around the country. The candor and compelling directness of its presentation speak well for the Army's sense of responsibility to the civilians who support and supply the fighting forces.

Anyone who thinks victory is an easy matter will get a nasty jolt from this film. It reveals that the Germans have more men under arms, with more murderous equipment, than when the war began; that the Japanese have better planes, in greater numbers, than when they sneaked up on Pearl Harbor. Films captured from the enemy show German and Japanese war plants grinding out weapons at a determined tempo. The network of Japanese island outposts with their interlocking interior lines of communication are diagrammed illuminatingly. They make clear how hard and hazardous is the road to Tokyo.

Men and women in war plants will get a better appreciation from this War Department report of how indispensable their work is to victory. It should give a healthy prod to production. But it would be an incentive to the rest of the public as well. That incentive should become a goad to redoubled effort and devotion at the incidental sight of some of the enemy's beastliness. We wonder why the War Department restricts its distribution. Everyone ought to see this film—and especially all those who have fallen into the fallacy that we can now coast along. It is an antidote for complacency.

Formidable Task

Investigators for the Treasury's Alcohol Tax Unit have become the spearhead of the drive against the black market in liquor. Although the enforcement of liquor ceiling prices rests with the OPA, the Treasury's agents are the men best equipped by training and experience to track down the illegal elements within the liquor industry. For it is their duty to see that the provisions of the internal revenue laws are observed year in and year out. There are very few ways of evading wartime restrictions and controls that do not entail violation of some provision of the revenue laws applicable to distilled spirits. Hence the revenue agents are in a position to render major service to the OPA and to the local and State liquor control boards that are trying to regulate the industry.

However, the Treasury agents will have their hands more than full trying to cope with the increase in moonshining, label counterfeiting, dilution of liquor, falsification of records, and other illegal practices that defraud the Government of revenue in addition to victimizing consumers and in some cases jeopardizing their health and lives. The most vigorous enforcement policy is bound to fall far short of its objectives under existing conditions. The simple reason is that the demand for liquor, especially for domestic whiskies, far exceeds the available supply offered for sale through legal channels. In other words, the revenue agents are confronted by conditions different only in degree from those characteristic of the prohibition era. What is worse, stocks of whisky in bonded warehouses are steadily diminishing owing to the ban on distilling. The Distilled Spirits Institute reports that at the present rate of consumption every gallon of the supply of whisky on hand would be exhausted within a year if distillers were to abandon self-imposed rationing restrictions. Furthermore, whisky cannot be put on the market as soon as produced; to be palatable it has to be aged. Hence if stocks should disappear entirely, there would be a period of several years following the lifting of the present ban on distilling before there would be any whisky fit to drink.

Some people may say that in the midst of a war that is straining our resources to the uttermost the whisky dearth is a matter of minor importance. Unfortunately the evils that follow in the wake of that dearth cannot safely be minimized. Moonshining, gangster warfare, and purveying of poison substitutes for liquor become more menacing as sources of supply of the legal liquor industry dry up. Contrariwise, these antisocial activities will decline—although it is too much to hope that they will vanish—if the legal distilling industry is permitted to build up its stocks and release more whisky for sale.

A Senate Committee has just begun hearings on the problems of the liquor industry. We hope that the committee will give earnest consideration to a question we have raised before—whether or to what extent it is possible to relax present 100% restrictions on distilling without unduly hampering production of industrial alcohol for war purposes. That is the only way to combat a shortage that, combined with high and rising prices for whisky, is fast creating an earthly paradise for bootleggers.

Rail-Pay Vote

Congress will undoubtedly be denounced for the seeming irresponsibility of its vote to grant a flat 8-cents-an-hour increase in pay to more than a million nonoperating railway employes. The vote has the effect of undoing a decision of Stabilization Director Vinson and thus tends to weaken the line against inflation which Judge Vinson and Justice Byrnes are struggling so vigorously to hold. A close reading of the debate on the resolution shows, however, that the Senate took this fact into consideration and voted nevertheless to override Judge Vinson's directive.

We are convinced from a reading of the debate that the vote was not in any sense a wild declaration in favor of inflation. Nor is it an attempt to take over the function of the Office of Economic Stabilization. Senator Ellender expressed the fear that if Congress should vote to grant this wage increase for nonoperating railway employes many other groups would be knocking at its door with similar demands. The fact that this thesis won only 4 votes out of 78 cast is largely accounted for by the peculiar circumstances surrounding this case. The Senate did not recklessly conclude that the railway workers should be supported against Judge Vinson. Rather it voted to uphold the award made by an arbitration board operating under the machinery of the Railway Labor Act. That doesn't set a precedent for a resolution granting the demands of any other group, unless those demands should be embodied in a legal award made through arbitration machinery created by law.

This action does not appear to encroach upon the Price Stabilization Act. For that law, as Majority Leader Barkley pointed out, exempted the negotiation of wage contracts under the provisions of the Railway Labor Act from its provisions. So did the President's executive orders on the subject, until he issued his "hold-the-line" order last April. What the Senate is saying in effect, then, is that the President had no authority to authorize Mr. Vinson to set aside a decision of a duly constituted legal arbitration board and substitute a decision of an executive-created board which had no standing under the Railway Labor Act. And that position seems to be sustained by the President's specific interpretation of the law when it was first passed.

In these circumstances we are constrained to alter our previous belief that the resolution sponsored by Senator Truman constitutes a serious dent in the hold-the-line order. No doubt there was a feeling among Senators that, since the President had given way to John L. Lewis, they were justified in yielding to the toned-down demands of the nonoperating railway unions. But this feeling appears to have been subordinate to the almost unanimous demand that the procedure outlined in the Railway Labor Act be upheld.

There was also a noticeable reluctance on the part of Senators to pass upon a case of this sort involving the wages of one particular group of employes. This reluctance strengthens the hope that the Senate will not make a practice of even entertaining appeals from private groups who wish to break down price and wage ceilings. If so, the vote of Thursday will not be seriously inflationary. For the award to the railway employes approved by Congress involves only 10 per cent more than the award approved by Judge Vinson. It will be absorbed by the railroads and not passed on in the form of higher freight rates. So if the Senate sticks by the assertion that its interest is in upholding the law and not in breaking it down, the chief result of its action will be a much needed lesson to the Administration not to interfere with the orderly operation of procedures established by Congress.

1944 Issues

In an article published in the Saturday Evening Post, Senator Taft says that the action taken by the Republican Postwar Advisory Council in Mackinac tends to remove any differences between the two parties on the question of the postwar political reorganization of the world. Consequently he concludes that "foreign policy may be entirely removed from politics, as it often has been during our history." Whether this prediction proves to be true or not, it is undeniable that the issues that are currently engrossing the attention of Administration officials, members of Congress and the public are primarily domestic in character. The policies to be followed in respect to taxation, price and rationing programs, food subsidies and wage controls are the really schismatic questions that give rise to heated political debates. Furthermore, Americans realize—consciously or unconsciously—that the postwar social and economic development of this country will depend to a large extent upon how soon and how completely we decide to abolish domestic wartime controls of this type after the advent of peace.

Senator Taft thinks that the main question to be decided in the 1944 elections is what kind of a country we, our children and our grandchildren are going to live in. Apparently he envisages the contest as a struggle between so-called New Deal elements that favor permanent retention of Government controls over a wide range of economic activities and groups ranged under the Republican banner that looks forward to emancipation from such controls and a return to free enterprise at the earliest possible moment. This line-up has the merit of sharp definition of an issue of principle that is implicit in most of the arguments that are being waged over wartime control programs and recommendations for dealing with postwar problems.

However, the war will leave behind it a heavy legacy of debt. It will leave the people in possession of huge sums of cash and claims to cash that might easily start an inflationary conflagration. It will release millions of men and women from wartime employment and from the armed services. However much we may yearn for a return of the freer ways of peace, it would be disastrous suddenly to sweep away the restrictions that have been imposed on us. Senator Taft himself recognizes the need for proceeding with moderation, as is evident from the many reservations accompanying his demands for a return to free enterprise. Even his condemnation of grandiose postwar spending of the WPA type is qualified by approval of a reasonable Federal public works program to be carried out when business shows signs of declining.

Challenge to Industry

Charles E. Wilson has presented a dual challenge to the industrialists of America. Facing the cream of the crop on Wednesday at the forty-eighth annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers, he told them that war production next year must top the record levels of 1943 by about 20 per cent. At the same time he called upon them for something even more difficult and more important than a production miracle. He asked of them self-restraint, political statesmanship.

No one has a better right than Charles Wilson to make such a demand. Himself a great industrialist, he laid aside private concerns to devote his energies and abilities exclusively to the service of his Government. For him there was no division of allegiance. He has learned a good deal about governmental problems and about politics, although he does not speak either as an official or as a politician. He knows industry well. And he is gravely disturbed by the cleavage which he discerns between industry and the Government.

"I tell you frankly," he declared, "that I am deeply alarmed today over the possibility that a right-wing reaction may draw some sections of capital so far away from our traditions as to imperil the entire structure of American life as we know it." The alarm is not groundless. There is an extremist element which has indefatigably fought the social changes of the past decade and which seeks still to bring about a reversion to the past. It sees in the approaching national election a chance, not to build upon the beginnings which have been made, but to overthrow them. As Mr. Wilson puts it, some "special political and economic groups want to win complete victory for themselves regardless of the consequences for others and for the Nation."

We have not yet won the war, and we have by no means solved the acute problems which are bound to follow it. For both purposes we shall stand in very real need of unity and of mutual trust. "This above all," Mr. Wilson told the NAM, "is a time when the industrial leaders of America owe it to their country and to themselves to exercise temperate judgment—to practice the arts of compromise—to avoid the temptation of sacrificing enduring values for temporary gains and to withhold encouragement from dangerous men who preach disunity."

Next year's election may seem to some businessmen an opportunity to end all Government impingements upon free and unfettered enterprise. If they view it in this light they will injure their own real interests, as well as the national stability. For their proper place is as one of the coordinate elements in our economic life. They have an adjustment to make which will require some self-discipline. In large measure, throughout most of industry, the adjustment has already been made. Mr. Wilson is warning against reaction. He thinks and speaks as a patriot—in the old, unsullied sense of that word.

HIGH TIDE AT CEMETERY POINT
Poem for a Lost Ship

What goes out of the cove
when the sea runs over, mixing the salt and the sand—drowning wild clover?

Mass has been said for the men and a prayer for the ships . . .
but for this that rides the dark
there is ice on the lips.

Fog blows white on a hill where a marker of wood holds a blurred name for the tongue to say if it could.

Surely more sound than surf comes up from the hollow and more moves out from land than a man can follow.

All words die in the mouth
when the color of night shows through the shape of a ship that carries no light.

Good Neighbors

By Virginia Prewett

Senate Document 132

SENATE DOCUMENT 132, which began life as "Butler in Wonderland," has not emerged in printed form on this writer's deadline, and the Capitol grapevine runs that the delay is caused by frantic patchings of holes shot through it by informed critics.

Whether the document will be basically changed in the printed proofs remains to be seen. Newsmen here took copious notes from the original when the bombshell was first hurled, and comparison can be made.

If all the padding, repetitions, wild guesses and outright errors are pruned, the total of money spent in Latin America will come very near Senator McKellar's original refuting figure, under 2½ billion dollars. Of this, up to 1¼ billion will be recoverable by our Government.

But correcting the figures of this attack on the Good Neighbor program will not fully rectify it. The text is larded with demonstrable errors. The basic error is the statement: "Latin America is not a major factor in this war."

Southern Bulwark

Latin America is a major factor in this war first of all because it guards our southern bulwark while we are fighting strong enemies in Europe and Asia.

Germany and Japan had long prepared to engage us on the south while striking from east and west. In the late 1930's, Nazi semimilitary parties were set up all over Latin America as part of an international network, the Liga Latina-Americana Pro Defensa Continental. In April 1941, this writer detailed in a book on Mexico how this league planned to rise against Americans living in Latin America on the day when the Axis should force us into war. This would disperse our military strength through the New World. Three months before Pearl Harbor, I published in a New York newspaper a description of the Japanese plan to cripple our Pacific fleet with a surprise blow opening hostilities. On the same day, the Nazi league was to strike in Latin America.

These plots were known to Latin American governments and were forestalled by their action in clamping down on Nazi plots. They began this soon after the fall of France, long before we took action here. When the Axis was ready to strike, the move against our Pacific fleet went through. The move in Latin America did not.

On December 7, 1941, Germany was supreme on the Continent, Britain rocking on her heels. Only our Pacific fleet and Singapore had stood between the Japanese and vast raw materials in the Pacific on which we were drawing to arm. On December 8, our Pacific fleet was paralyzed and Singapore was doomed.

Axis Activities

Latin-American Countries clamped down on Axis activities in the Canal region, our vulnerable spot, and rushed official statements of support to us. While they held the Southern Bulwark, we rushed forces through the Canal to win the battles of Midway and the Coral Sea, securing bases from which to strike back at Japanese conquest.

I ask my readers to imagine the situation if we had had to rush Naval forces to Latin America to save American lives from Nazi uprisings there in the black months after Pearl Harbor.

Latin American countries let us build the great string of airbases over which we ferried fighting planes to the British at El Alamein, where they stood between the Germans and Suez, major life line to the then reeling Russia. Material rushed around South America's hump enabled the British to hold till ships could get them supplies for the counteroffensive that ended in desert victory.

It may come as a shock to many Americans, but we do not even in time of peace produce enough of at least 40 raw materials to keep our machine civilization going. We do not have and cannot develop eight basic minerals without which we could not make the steel and metal machines of war.

We were depending on the Southwest Pacific for a number of indispensable imports. After Pearl Harbor, we turned frantically to Latin America to help replace them. Latin America is cooperating fully in the great drive to get them out.

Our productive capacity and manpower had been the democracies' ace in the hole. But without raw materials we could not have realized on this. Latin-America's raw materials have been our ace in the hole that trumped the Japanese move taking our Pacific resources. For this alone, Latin America is a major factor in this war.

If final figures on our Latin-American spending are not available for discussion next week, I shall take up the Butler accusation that Latin-American nations "charge, and ge... premium prices for every dollar's worth of strategic materials . . . They force these high prices out of Uncle Sam by the well-known blackmail threat to sell to the Axis if we don't pay them the premium price they want." This is outrageously untrue.

The "Drag" Phase

By Barnet Nover

Secretary Stimson's Warning

DURING THE PAST year American optimism regarding the course of the war has steadily mounted. Every victory won by the Allies has strengthened the popular feeling that the struggle, at least in Europe, is nearing its end. And the recent Teheran conference, with its emphasis on Anglo-Russian-American unity and its promise of early and concerted blows against Germany from the east, the west and the south, has given a strong boost to that belief.

Now this optimism, at least with respect to the probable duration of the conflict in the European theater, is not in itself unjustified.

Allied power is still growing; German power is declining. Germany has had to disgorge a large part of the territory she acquired in Russia. She is on the defensive on the Eastern Front and in Italy. The Mediterranean is ours and the Atlantic is now the graveyard of the U-boats rather than of our merchant shipping. And Allied air power is bearing down with increasing force on German production, German morale.

WHERE OPTIMISM is unjustified, and dangerously so, is in assuming that from now on we and our allies will have easy sailing.

Nothing could be further from the truth, no belief could be productive of more harm. Such a belief is certain to lead to bitter disillusionment.

That is why Secretary Stimson's warning that for us the worst is yet to come is very much to the point. For the nearer we approach the climax in Europe the more the fighting is likely to increase rather than diminish in bitterness and intensity, the more we must anticipate mounting casualties.

"We have every reason for encouragement and hope," he said. "The behavior of our men upon the battlefield has been superb. But the great decisive test for them and for us has yet to come."

DIVIDING the war into three stages, the "onset," the "drag" and the "finish," Secretary Stimson argues that in the two years since Pearl Harbor we have barely managed to reach the second stage.

For a year, he points out, we were engaged entirely in defensive operations to halt the advance of the enemy. The second year saw us wresting the initiative from the enemy. But even today practically all the fighting we have done (except the fighting in the air) has been along the perimeter of the enemy's power in Europe and Asia.

Unless, therefore, there is a sudden and speedy collapse of the enemy, most improbable in the case of Japan at this juncture, possible but not immediately likely in the case of Germany, the toughest phase of the fighting is still before us.

ACTUALLY, the Allies are in the position of a mountain climber who, after terrific effort and many setbacks, has finally reached a point within sight of the top.

The longest part of his climb is behind him, as the longest part of the war is behind us. But even as that mountain climber still has the hardest part of his climb before him before the summit is reached, so we still have to reckon on endless difficulties before victory.

THE EQUATION of battle is full of unknowns.

We have no way of telling, for example, whether and at what point Allied bombing of German cities will create a split between the rulers and the ruled in the Reich which no amount of Nazi terrorism will then be able to bridge.

Nor can we assume that at a certain point the German retreat in Russia, if it is resumed, as is very probable, will be transformed into a rout.

Up to the present certainly, the bombing of German cities has not succeeded in halting, though it has certainly hampered, German military operations. And the German army, wherever it is in contact with Allied troops, remains an army in being.

THE EFFECTS of defeat are cumulative. For more than a year Germany has lost all but a few minor engagements. There must be in Germany today a fairly widespread recognition of the fact that the Reich cannot win the war and will sooner or later lose it.

This awareness of the probability of defeat will certainly have a bearing on the course as well as the duration of the war. But until the breaking point is actually reached in Germany we must assume, and the fighting in Italy gives point to that assumption, that the Germans will stop at nothing to avert disaster.

In this connection, the point must be reemphasized that in the last war our troops did not begin moving into the front-line trenches in any great numbers before midsummer, by which time the Germans were licked and knew they were licked. But during those last months of summer and the closing weeks of the war we suffered the preponderance of our casualties.

Today as in 1918 the military situation lends itself to confidence, but not to complacence.

Soldier Vote

I read with considerable interest your editorial on the "Soldier Vote" in the recent Sunday (December 5) issue of The Post. The writer did a noble job in presenting a fair resume of the facts and circumstances involved in this congressional battle.

The whole question of the servicemen's vote appears like other important questions confronting Congress, to be handled like a political football. The real question of allowing American citizens on the firing line, or stationed in camps in various parts of the world their just right as a citizen of this great country, to take part in a national election, is being utilized for political purposes . . . and the real issue—American issue—is being entirely ignored. Congressional leaders can not afford to bungle this problem, which strikes at the heart of almost every home in the Nation. When men and women risk their lives to protect the many freedoms for which this Nation stands, they have not given up their right to vote, nor are they less interested in the way the country operates its Government . . . If anything, they are more interested in their homes, their loved ones and the future of their children. This is one that Congress can's pass by without sweating blood to make it work. It's a tough problem, everyone recognizes the fact, but making it a political issue only makes it tougher. And while we speak of what's "tough," let's not forget the "toughness" of Salerno, Guadalcanal and Tarawa.

While new regulations are being born in order to prevent men and women overseas from receiving anything but the truth about our coming political campaigns, perhaps some provision will be made so that civilians may also tune in to this unbiased-truth program.

Let's not be afraid of the "soldier vote" . . . We are not afraid to bask in the safety that they give us. So let's make it an all-American, all-out support of the soldier vote. This is a home-front battle . . . Come on civilians!

Painters Play

I dare say many of those who have visited the National Gallery of Art have been appalled by the vast blankness of its exterior walls. Perhaps it would not be going too far to point out that the National Gallery's forbidding exterior typifies on a grand scale American unimaginativeness as represented by the architecture of scores of thousands of our lesser public and private buildings and even in so small a thing as our window curtains (98 per cent of which are plain white).

Why not some glorious murals on the exterior of the National Gallery's walls? Some color in our window curtains?

Plea For Temperance

I recently attended a rally at Constitution Hall under the auspices of the American Temperance Society at which F. C. Carrier, its executive secretary, was the principal speaker.

As an average citizen not addicted to the habitual use of alcoholics, I wish to respectfully take exception to Mr. Carrier's remarks and to point out wherein I believe he is wrong.

In the first place the American Temperance Society does not advocate temperance at all. What they advocate with loud acclaim is an unnatural total compulsory abstinence from all stimulating beverages and the utter destruction and ruination of one of the oldest, most conservatively operated and successful industries in the world, which gives legitimate employment to hundreds of thousands of decent, law-abiding, industrious citizens.

They would deprive the Government, national, State and local, of billions of dollars in revenue and in lieu thereof they would restore a prohibition era, the cost and horror of which is still very vivid in the memory of the present generation.

Does Mr. Carrier want us to return to that state of affairs which we have already experimented in to our deep sorrow and regret?

I also wish to take exception to Mr. Carrier's statement that the youth of our country are being corrupted in the Army camps throughout the country by exposing themselves to the sale of beer in Army and Navy canteens. I have just returned from a cross-country trip in which I visited nearly 100 Army and Navy training camps, and while the legitimate sale of beer was available at most of the canteens for uniformed men, in limited quantities and at specified hours, the great majority of men preferred what they had been accustomed to drink in civil life, soft drinks. Not one case of intoxication from drinking beer obtained on Army or Navy reservation was found.

The only sane, logical and permanent remedy for excessive abuses of anything—food, drugs, liquor, tobacco or any form of vice or debilitation—is not in legislating against its indulgence but in the education of the youth of our country to be temperate in all things.

Looking To The Future

By Paul Winkler

Underground Groups

ONE OF the most striking developments among the resistance groups of occupied Europe is the interest these underground workers are manifesting, not only in the immediate task of ridding themselves of foreign oppression, but in that of preparing a better future for their countries and the world. They seem to feel in common that their sufferings should be made to serve for something, that it is part of their aim, not only to rectify present errors, but also to correct those of the past, which made possible the situation in which they find themselves today.

It is particularly significant that in Poland, a country whose political structure between the two wars hardly satisfied all the ideals of democracy, this eagerness to construct a future world on sounder principles should be so marked.

Like many other Polish organizations, the Polish teachers "dove under"—to use the European expression, today common to many countries, for going underground. At first, this simply provided a means for discussion as to how to spread democratic ideas among Polish youth despite the occupation, and for an exchange of information concerning happenings in the outside world. But like other underground groups in Poland, the teachers today are giving particular attention to the work which lies ahead of them after the liberation of their country; and their last secret meeting was devoted to setting up a plan for education in postwar Poland.

Plan Worked Out

The plan was worked out in great detail. It provides for compulsory free education up to the age of 18, plus additional help in the form of scholarships. All deserving students are to have facilities for acquiring college and university training. Ambitious plans have also been made for adult education, through people's universities, libraries, theaters, museums, radio, educational trips for peasants and workers, camps, sports, etc.

"We believe that economic goods should be used as a means of progress for men and society," the teachers stated, in resolutions passed at their underground meeting, "and demand that the prime importance of culture and education in national and public life be recognized fully and constitutionally . . . In order to provide Polish cultural and educational institutions with a sound financial basis, and of the property of Polish citizens found guilty of treason be allotted to these institutions."

Thus the teachers tie in together the two chief aims of all underground movements: Sanctions and reconstruction.

The teachers also voted to cooperate with other democratic movements in the solution of cultural, educational, social and economic problems, and to give full support to plans for international cooperation among all democratic peoples throughout the world.

Other Polish groups hold similar ideas. The oldest Polish underground newspaper, the labor monthly, Wolnosc (Freedom), reporting on English and American discussions concerning an international police force wrote:

"The Polish labor movement supports this project wholeheartedly, aimed as it is at putting an end to the danger of war, that terrible nightmare which has menaced mankind for centuries. The League of Nations failed because of its weakness, because it lacked adequate enforcement powers."

Underground Thoughts

Another instance in which underground thoughts turn instinctively from the present to the future occurs in those resistance groups which concern themselves particularly with the plight of Poland's children. Families have been torn apart and uprooted throughout the country. Orphans have been made by the thousand. Roving groups of children, like those which presented so serious a problem in Russia immediately after the revolution, are today the subject for immediate concern for the underground, and the same resistance fighters who on one hand are carrying on the dangerous work of sabotage, turn on the other to bringing tenderness into the lives of these children, feeding them, finding them homes, giving them the affection which they would ordinarily have received from their parents.

"The orphans, children of dead, wounded and exiled Poles, are ours," one women's underground paper wrote. "We must give them the friendship and warmth they have lost. We must share our bread with them. That is our task today."

But, the responsibility does not end with the immediate task, so this article continued:

"In the future, when victory is won, we must introduce such changes into the social life of our nation as will assure to new generations not only parental protection, which is not always sufficient, but also the care of society from the very first days of childhood."

Obviously, for Poles a return to the past will not be a satisfactory result from this war. They will demand a future better than the past, one in which they will no longer be subject to the semi-Fascistic influences which existed in Poland before the war, and which still exist in the Polish government in exile.

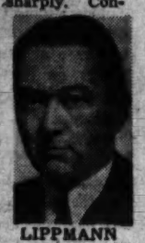
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Congressional Disorder

THE CONFLICT between the organized farm groups and organized labor is undoubtedly the main fact in our domestic politics. Let us try to understand it.

SINCE THE summer of 1940 the demand for almost all farm products and for industrial labor has been rising sharply. Congress, while it enacted military conscription, has rejected compulsory national service for men who, though fit to work, were exempt from or unfit for the armed forces. This meant that civilians had to be induced by money payments to do war work. The inducements have taken the form of higher prices, various types of subsidy, and higher wage rates.



LIPPMANN

The monetary inducements to wage earners have been relatively higher on the whole than those to the farmers or to any other large group in the Nation. For, in the absence of compulsory service, men had to be lured out of the less essential occupations to which they were accustomed into the vital war industries to which they were not accustomed. Women had to be induced to enter factories. Families had to be induced to move from their homes to the new and overcrowded centers of war production. To make the inducement sufficient the rates of wages became abnormally high, and these high rates for the new labor force that had to be lured were naturally applied, under union pressure, to the old labor force in the war industries. Where this did not happen, as in the case of the coal miners who worked for two years under a prewar contract, there was bitter resentment which Mr. John L. Lewis reflected and acted upon. The net result of the national policy of inducing war work rather than of requiring it as a national service has been that wage earners are for the time being the newly rich.

The farmers have also had a very substantial increase of money income,—but not so much of an increase as they would have had in an uncontrolled market. They have had much worry and trouble adjusting themselves as managers of their enterprises to changing war conditions. Though absolutely they have on the whole done well, relatively they have not done so well as the war workers, and they have been told by their leaders and by politicians cadging their votes that the Government controls as set up in the interests of organized labor deprive the farmers of profit that they could otherwise earn.

THIS CONFLICT has come to a head in Congress in the movement to prohibit so-called consumer food subsidies and in a general assault on the whole system of price control. The movement is undeniably inflationist; the farm bloc throughout American history has favored soft money—usually to reduce the burden of its indebtedness to its creditors in the cities, in this case to lower what it regards as the unduly high real wages of industrial labor.

IN THE CONFLICT between the farm organizations and the labor unions both parties in Congress have become entangled. Neither of them has been able to rise above it and make itself the guardian of the national interest. The Republicans have allied themselves with the farm organizations. Their calculation is that they can take for granted the bulk of the employers, a considerable mass of those who are generally disgruntled with the Administration, and that labor may be divided by the factionalism of men like John L. Lewis, or be in part disfranchised by change of residence or by being in the armed forces.

The Southern wing of the Democratic Party has also allied itself with the farm organizations which speak for powerful interests in the Southern States. Moreover, the South, which is entering a new and undoubtedly great era of industrialization, is represented in politics by men who distrust the new status of the wage earner. This distrust is exacerbated by the fact that so much potential labor in the South is Negro labor.

A WISE MAN once said: "Beware of too much explaining, lest we end by too much excusing." In this conflict, even if we explain everything, making a catalogue of all the grievances and resentments that just men might feel or demagogues arouse, the fact remains that the failure of Congress to stand high and firm above the farmer-labor conflict is inexcusable. Even if the farm leaders and the labor leaders really spoke for all farmers and laborers, which by all objective tests of opinion they do not, it is still the fact that these are special interests contending for special advantages.

At the climax of this great war and on the eve of the terrible ordeal through which our fighting men have still to pass, it is a sorry spectacle to have the Congress of the United States demeaning itself to this struggle instead of insisting that it be composed. For these lobbyists, to whom they bend their quaking knees, are quarreling about money while men are dying and the world is on fire.

IF THE politicians must play politics, not being willing to risk their seats while other men risk their lives, then let them realize that they are not playing good politics. The first to play stupid politics was the Administration. Any experienced observer could have told the Administration, and many of them have repeatedly told it, that if it did not insist upon universal service, if it had instead to inflate the wage rates to man the war industries, then elementary prudence required that it insist upon regulating the power of labor unions as it had regulated corporations, stock exchanges, and banks. The combination of an excessive demand for labor and the unregulated power of the unions was bound to produce a bitter reaction in the rest of the community.

But the Republican politicians in Congress are playing no less stupid politics. They have forgotten the housewives, the pensioners, the Government employees on fixed salaries, the bondholders and the insured, the families of men dependent on soldiers' allowances, and the soldiers themselves whose savings at home are threatened, who when they are demobilized will be the first to suffer if the inflationists break up the control of prices.

THE REPUBLICAN politicians in Congress are also forgetting the interests of the employers and the financial institutions. They treat them as so anti-New Deal as to be securely in the bag. If the Republican politicians upset the price and wage structure and weaken the currency, they will present industry and banking with insoluble problems during the remainder of the war and in the period of reconversion.

If the Republican Party has one economic principle which has been fundamental doctrine since Alexander Hamilton, it has been that money must be sound and solid. Yet here is the party in Congress going straight down the line for the inflationists—refusing to hold prices level, refusing to tax, encouraging every special interest which, if it had its way, would make the real value of the American dollar lower and dangerously uncertain.

No wonder the Republicans who take a national view, and would like their party to represent it, are dismayed.

New Jersey's GOP Voters Favor Dewey; Willkie, MacArthur Run Second, Third

By GEORGE GALLUP,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 10.—If New Jersey's 35 delegates to next year's Republican National Convention were taking orders today straight from the GOP voters of the State, they would mark Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York as their first choice for the presidential nomination in 1944.

Interest in how New Jersey Republican voters are thinking on the question of the GOP presidential candidate for 1944 has been heightened considerably since the election in early November, when the State went Republican along with New York and Kentucky.

A survey by the Institute throughout New Jersey reveals Governor Dewey still first choice among Republicans of that State, although his strength has declined four percentage points since September of this year.

Wendell Willkie's strength in New Jersey has remained unchanged during the same period. He ranks second to Dewey. General Douglas MacArthur, while still in third place, has picked up some additional support in New Jersey.

The findings are shown in the following table comparing the present New Jersey GOP vote with that in a survey reported in September. In each case Republican voters were handed a card containing the names of nominee possibilities most often mentioned by political commentators and asked to select one name as their choice for the Republican nomination in 1944:

	Sept.	Today
Dewey	43%	39%
Willkie	30	30
MacArthur	14	17
Taft	8	7
Bricker	3	4
Stassen	1	3
Others	1	*

*Less than 1 per cent.

The above figures show how each of the prospective candidates stands in relation to the others. Since not all of them would be likely to enter their names in a primary in a State, the figures do not represent a prediction of how primary elections in the State would turn out. Moreover, the present standings of each candidate may change as time goes on because of new developments of one kind and another.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Dutch Bergman, who coaches the Redskins and is confronted this weekend with the line-crashing power of the New York Giants, now seeks aid and comfort from the club's physician and trainer. Bergman has been beseeching his medical staff for some word of encouragement in his hour of distress.

POVICH

There's nothing phoney about Bergman's distress. Tomorrow his Redskins will meet up with Ben Paschal, the league's leading groundgainer, operating behind a Giant line that outplayed the Redskins completely only a week ago. Bergman's three best tackles, Willie Wilkin, Lou Rymkus and Tony Pacqua are hurt. So are his two best guards, Dick Farman and Steve Slivinski. Farman won't play at all tomorrow. Slivinski is limping badly. Capt. Bob Masterson and Joe Aguirre, the No. 1 ends are sick and injured.

Bergman's backfield is also in foul shape. Sammy Baugh can play 60 minutes if necessary, but Bob Seymour and Andy Farkas are brutally bruised. Wilbur Moore will listen to the play-by-play tomorrow from his hospital bed. Frank Seno, speed boy of the backfield, is slowed by a leg injury. Hour by hour, Bergman hopes for an improvement of his plight.

"We've lost our last two games on account of our line," said Bergman. It was no slur on Line Coach Turk Edwards, he hastened to add. "We've been beaten through the line these last two Sundays, but it was our line that won our first six games for us. Your line either wins the game for you or ruins you.

"When Turk's linemen had their good health earlier in the season, they made it easy for my backs. They're still good ball players, but they're hurt, and in that condition it's nobody's fault when we lose. Take the play that beat us last Sunday, with Paschal running through our line for 53 yards in the last four minutes after we were leading. Lou Rymkus, a great tackle, had a hold of Paschal, but couldn't keep him. He wrenched away from Rymkus because Lou's chipped elbow was giving him trouble, and we lost the ball game."

Throughout the Redskins' early-season successes when the talk was of Baugh's superb passing, and Wilbur Moore's pass-catching and reverse-play runs, the Redskin coaches insisted on due credit to their guards. They meant Farman and Slivinski. "They're the best in the league," said Bergman. "Farman is out of Sunday's game and Slivinski will play, but he's not in good shape. You can't have them out of there and try to believe you're not hurt."

At a point in the season where the Redskins are having their troubles mustering their strength, the Giants have come along rapidly. Steve Owen had little to work with at the outset but he has done a job with what he has. In Al Blozis, the Georgetown boy, Owen may have the league's best tackle.

Blozis wasn't a good tackle when he came to the Giants from Georgetown. Most of his reputation accrued because Blozis was a picturesque figure—a hulking young giant who held shot-put records and was now playing football. "He's green, and he doesn't capitalize on either his strength or his speed," said Owen two years ago, "but some day he's going to be a great tackle." The Giants' coach has seen that prediction fulfilled. Last week there was some question whether Blozis was a member of the Giants' line or the Redskins' backfield.

Owen didn't have a passer at the outset of the season, except for Tuffy Leemans and Emery Nix, a rookie, and neither of them were any great shucks. Out of necessity Owen had to bear down on his running game. In that department he seems to have done very well. Paschal has gained more ground running than any back in the league.

Owen's favorite football player, though, is Ward Cuff, the veteran back who down through the years with the Giants was a blocking back and field-goal kicker. This year, Owen impressed Cuff into service as a runner. From his same blocking back spot, Cuff carries the ball on the Giants' reverses. It was the threat of Cuff's reverses that opened the Redskins' line for Paschal's charges through the middle last week.

It's a modified T formation that Owen is using this season, featuring the man in motion, but with the tailback taking the ball on the direct pass from center. That's were Tuffy Leemans has been fitting into the scheme nicely. It's Leemans who originates the fakes in the Giants' backfield with his clever handling of the ball. The opposition is never sure who has it. Last Sunday, Leemans was giving the empty hand to Cuff, the ball to Paschal and the business to the Redskins all afternoon.

Quinn Denies Marlboro Race Fix Charge

Southeastern Schools May Revive Grid

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 10 (AP).—A revival of football at several major colleges was indicated today as the Southeastern Conference scrapped its last peacetime athletic eligibility restriction.

The 12-school conference, which had only four teams playing a full football schedule this year, voted 8-4 to extend eligibility to civilian transfer students, throwing its sports open to all bona fide students. Proponents predicted it would help revive football at institutions which had dropped the sport for the duration.

The conference previously had discarded the ban on use of freshman players, and granted eligibility to all players in armed service. The new amendment on civilian transfers bans only those who have completed four years' competition, or those with professional experience.

Alabama May Be Back

At least three members indicated that they might resume play next season—Alabama, Tennessee and Vanderbilt—and hope was held in some quarters that others might do likewise. Georgia and Louisiana State played this season with civilian teams. Georgia Tech and Tulane were aided by Navy V-12 talent.

The conference elected Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, head of the University of Georgia, as president; Dr. R. Paty, president of Alabama as vice president, and reelected Dr. W. D. Funkhouser of Kentucky, as secretary-treasurer.

Arrangements were made to hold the annual conference basketball tournament in Louisville, Ky., either the last weekend in February, or the first weekend in March.

John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Western Conference, predicted that the Navy's highly-successful preflight school athletic program would become a peacetime pattern for physical education in American colleges.

Criticism Issue Raised

Addressing the annual conference meeting, Griffith said prewar criticism had been directed at intercollegiate athletics because maximum attention usually was centered on a minimum number of exceptional athletes, while less talented players had little chance to compete. He added:

"I believe that the Navy's program, especially in its preflight schools, has been eminently sound. It gives training in competitive athletics to every student.

"Let's build physical education after the war around sports. Based on Navy experience, I think we're foolish if we don't try the plan."

Says Charge By Deceased Rider False

Baltimore, Dec. 10 (AP).—Jockey Matthew Quinn today branded as "False, absolutely false," charges that he attempted to bribe another rider to hold back a horse in the first race at Marlboro on November 27, closing day of the Prince Georges County track's 10-day meeting.

Death had robbed the Maryland Racing Commission of its principal witness in Quinn's hearing, for the jockey who preferred the charges, Joseph W. Pannell, was killed in a three-horse pile-up at the Charles Town, W. Va., track yesterday.

At the conclusion of today's testimony, Chairman Frank Small, jr., of the commission, said he would confer with the attorney general's office before deciding if Pannell's widow, Anna, should be called.

Quinn's attorney, E. Milson Altfeld, said he would not ask Mrs. Pannell to testify, but would cross-examin her if she were summoned by the commission.

Had Signed Statement

Both Pannell and his wife, State witnesses testified, had signed a statement accusing Quinn, a 27-year-old native of South Dakota, of offering Pannell $150 if he would pull the horse White Sea in the race in question.

White Sea won the race, paying $4.70 for $2 to win.

Quinn denied having any conversation with Pannell about that race, but said he had talked to him about the fifth race on the same day's program. Quinn said he had heard from a tout and another man, neither of whom he could identify by name, that Pannell had been bribed to hold back his mount in the fifth race.

Quinn said he felt his mount in that event had a good chance to win and that when he chanced to meet Pannell and his wife in a Marlboro hotel, he asked him about the rumors. Pannell shook his head and said nothing, Quinn said.

His testimony was corroborated in part by another rider, Wilbur Rudert, who said he was present at the breakfast table at which the conversation took place.

Rudert said Quinn asked Pannell whether he had taken money "to pull the horse," and Rudert said he assumed from the previous conversation that they were speaking of the fifth race. The event was won by a third horse, with Quinn's mount second and Pannell's third.

The three Marlboro stewards—George Brown, jr., William L. Harron and Ty Shea—testified they saw Pannell sign the brief typewritten statement accusing Quinn and they heard Mrs. Pannell dictate her corroborating statement and saw her sign it. Quinn was present and denied the Pannell accusations, they said.

Suspended Quinn

The stewards testified that one of the racing commissioners, George P. Mahoney, made the original investigation of the case and that they did not hear of it until the time of the fifth race. They then questioned Pannell and Quinn and suspended the latter rider pending further action of the commission.

Mahoney announced during the hearing that he wanted to testify in fairness to Pannell, whom he called an "honest, conscientious jockey who would have wanted the whole truth in this case."

Altfeld objected to what he called Mahoney's "emotionable outburst," saying it had no place in the case.

Cards' Ernie White To Get Draft Call

Spartanburg, S. C., Dec. 10 (AP). Ernie White of Pacolet, pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Baseball League, will be called for induction into the armed service in January, it was learned from his local draft board here.

The Cardinal southpaw recently stood his physical examination and was classified 1-A, according to draft board records.

White, who is married and has one child, spends his winters in his home town of Pacolet, where he got his start in baseball, playing on textile mill teams.

All-Service Team Is Coaches' Dream

By Chip Royal

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Did you ever see dreams (of football coaches) playing on the country's gridirons? Well, the lucky fans who saw service teams in action this year did.

If you were one of the less fortunate, slant your eyes at the 1943 All-America Service team selected by the Associated Press, the first of its kind. And don't forget to look at the second team and the honorable mention group. There are enough All-America and All-Pro candidates there to make a coach's heart do flip-flops.

First, the ace backfield: Corpl. Glenn Dobbs, Randolph Field, Tex.; Ensign Dick Todd, Iowa Preflight; Lieut. Len Eshmont, Del Monte Preflight and Cadet Bruce Smith, St. Mary's Preflight.

What ball carriers, kickers, passers and backs!

And a Dream Line

Then the line: Ends, Sergt. Jack Russell, Blackland, Tex., Air Field, and Chief Specialist Bob Fitch, Camp Lejeune, N. C.; tackles, Corpl. Johnny Mellus, Camp Davis N. C., and Ensign Ray Bray, Del Monte, Calif., Preflight; guards, Seaman Garrard Ramsey, Bainbridge, Md., Naval Training Station; Sergt. Marion Rogers, South Plains, Texas, Army Airfield; center, Ensign Vincent Banonis, Iowa Preflight.

Maybe they are better known by their colleges. All-America Dobbs went to Tulsa; Todd, Texas A. & M.; Eshmont, Fordham; All-America Smith, Minnesota; Russell, Baylor; Fitch, Minnesota; Mellus, Villanova; Bray, Western Michigan; All-America Ramsey, William & Mary; Rogers, Maryville Teachers, Mo.; Banonis, Detroit University.

Of these top service team gridders, Fitch is a Coast Guardsman from North Carolina's Camp Lejeune. Five others now are stationed at Navy stations and five at Army bases.

A Stellar Pro Aggregation

Mellus was one of the big New York Giants linemen before Pearl Harbor, Banonis was with the Chicago Cardinals, Bray the Chicago Bears; Eshmont, also of the Giants; and Todd, the Washington Redskins.

Getting down to the so-called vital statistics, the average age of the "dream team" is 24, the average weight, 201 pounds. Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Michigan and Texas each claim to be the resident States of two men, while the other three came from Missouri, Tennessee and Oklahoma.

Todd, at 29, is the oldest man on the first team, Ramsey and Banonis, both 22, are the youngest. Glenn Dobbs, towering 6 feet 4 inches, is the giant, while Todd also is the midget of the 11 at 5 feet 10.

Tough to Make Selections

Selecting this great 1943 service All-America was no easy task. There are many former All-College and All-Pro stars scattered throughout the country. Most of them landed on the second team, or the honorable mention squad, because the top 11 men were just a little better.

Take a look at the first team again.

Banonis at center in that Iowa Preflight line was everything that the word bulwark means. His passes were perfect, he protected his backs, opened holes, and always played a really great defensive game. Vince was even better than when they rated him one of the ace pro centers.

Ramsey and Rogers are the guards. Garrard was greater than in his All-America days last year. He called defensive formations for Bainbridge, backed up the line, and was especially keen on pass defense.

Marion has been hailed by Texans as the best lineman they have seen. He pulled out of the South Plains line to lead interference on running plays, was an excellent blocker, and clever in detecting the opposition's attack.

Yankees' Keller Deferred, but Must Keep Defense Job

Frederick, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Charley (King Kong) Keller, slugging outfielder of the world champion New York Yankees, was given a six-month deferment from military service today, but Yankee fans can derive little joy from the fact.

KELLER

Comdr. C. H. Bryant, assistant director of Selective Service in Maryland, spiked any premature elation over Keller's possible reappearance in the Yankee line-up in 1944, by saying that under existing Selective Service regulations Keller would be subject to immediate reclassification into 1-A should he leave his war job.

Keller, a Frederick County native, recently took a job in a plant engaged in the production of Army ordanance, and was given occupational deferment (2-B) until June 9. Previously he had been reclassified into 1-A.

The Yankee slugger said he had not yet received his 2-B reclassification card and had not given the matter of playing baseball next season much thought.

Maryland U. To Open Cage Slate Tonight

The University of Maryland will open its 1943-44 basketball schedule tonight, the twenty-first season for veteran Coach H. Burton Shipley, by entertaining the Quantico Marines in Maryland's Ritchie Coliseum at 8 in the first of nine games with service teams for the Old Liners.

Maryland will give away height and experience to the Leathernecks who will invade College Park with a squad comprised of college basketball veterans. The Marines have perfect record in two games to date, including a 47-43 triumph over Curtis Bay Coast Guard. Shipley hopes to offset the Marines advantages with speed and the quick break.

At forward the Old Liners will open up with Jack Flynn, from the frosh squad of last year, and Joe Acito a promising New Jersey High School product. The only tall boy on the 14-man squad, 6 foot 6 Gil Tauscher from Bethesda High, will jump center. Tauscher is green and has not yet learned to use his height to advantage, but Shipley will give him plenty of work in the early games.

The only holdover from last year's squad, Ermy Englebert, will start at guard with Frank Doory of Baltimore. First on the reserve list are Dick Tuschak, the Old Liners' outstanding football player, and two District candidates, Walt Kolodne and Tom Chisari.

Maryland has three games scheduled before the holidays. Marshall College will visit next Friday and Bainbridge Naval Training Station on December 21.

Gallaudet College, Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament champions, will meet Loyola, the conference standings leader last year, tonight in the Greyhounds' gym in Baltimore. American University's scheduled game with Washington College in Chestertown, Md., has been postponed, as was its game scheduled last night with Bridgewater College.

Bob Seymour Classified 1-A

Commerce, Okla., Dec. 10 (AP).—Robert Seymour of the Washington Redskins, National Professional Football League champions, was classified 1-A by his local draft board today.

The former University of Oklahoma fullback will not be called until January, the board said, which will permit him to finish the season with the Redskins.

Seymour has one son.

Bill Bennings Picks Five Winners and Half of Dead Heat

Bill Bennings, The Post's handicapper, broke out in a rash of winners yesterday. He picked five and a half winners, his sixth winning choice figuring in a dead heat. Bill started with the $10.80 daily double of Swifty Fox and Gay Elf. The former paid $3.40 and the latter $4.80. Bill selected Bill's Anne at $24.80 in the fourth. He came back with Darby Dallas at $4.20 in the fifth, picked Silver Beam at $2.80 in the sixth-race dead heat and closed the day with Cruiser, $7.80 winner, in the eighth. Fly Gent was his second choice in the third and Robert E. Lee was his third choice in the seventh.

Berger Slated For Workout Here Today

Today Washingtonians will get their first glimpse of Maxie Berger, former world junior welterweight champ and present Canadian welter titlist, when Berger reports for a public workout at 3 p. m. today at Liberty A. C. gym in a final tuneup for his 10-round feature bout with Ernest (Cat) Robinson, New York Negro, at Uline Arena, Monday night.

Accompanied by Ray Arcel, nationally known handler and trainer of fighters, Berger will spar at least four rounds and will punch the bag, shadow box and skip rope for a full ten rounds. Robinson, meanwhile, who gave Washington's Frankie Wills a tough battle two weeks ago, will wind up training in Stillman's New York gym.

Billy Speary, Nanticoke, Pa., lightweight, who meets Washington Billy Banks in the 10-round semifinal, will report tomorrow and will loosen up at Liberty A. C. gym at 3 p. m. Banks who has demanded from Promoter Goldie Ahearn a return bout with Vic Creelman, has been told he must get over the high ranking Speary before he will be considered for a return shot with the New York sailor, who has won 28 straight.

Promoter Ahearn last night announced he had secured Bob Montgomery, former lightweight champion, for a January bout here and would probably match the Berger-Robinson winner with "Tiger Bob."

RCAF, Curtis Bay Ice Game Canceled

Because eight members of the Royal Canadian Air Force ice hockey team are bedridden with influenza in Montreal, the crack Canadians have been forced to cancel their match with the Curtis Bay (Md.) Coast Guard Clippers at Uline Arena Tuesday night.

However, at 8:30 p. m. next Friday the powerful Clippers are to bring hockey back to Washington when they skate out against Wilfred (Pick) Hines' HMS York Canadian Naval All Stars at Uline Arena.

Generals Defeat Greenbelt, 56 to 7

George Washington High School of Alexandria defeated Greenbelt High, 56-17, at Greenbelt last night without a serious threat by the Greenies throughout the game. The Generals led 30-10 at the half and went on to coast in with 26 more. Bill Hensley, a gridiron ace for the Generals during the autumn, was high scorer, with 20 points.

Two Sixes Booked for Turner Card

Two six-round matches, one a light-heavyweight battle, the other a batlte of lightweights, were added yesterday to Tuesday night's double windup boxing show at Turner's Arena.

In one, Joey Finazzo, of the famous fighting Finazzo family of Baltimore, will met Corpl. Billy Duncan, Fort Belvoir light-heavy.

The other six finds Don Bacala, also of a well-known Baltimore fighting family, opposing Jimmy McGriff of Washington.

In the double windup, Aaron Perry, Washington's Negro "Whiz Kid" and kayo sensation, will tackle Taffy Cummings of the Royal British Navy and Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, will oppose Charley Benett of Baltimore, who is making his home here for the present.

Latsios is expected to enjoy a shade in the betting on Bennett, possibly by 6-5. Bennett, however, has gained a lot of supporters since his second upset triumph the other night over Eddie Kane.

Perry-Cummings scrap is expected to be even money despite the fact Perry scored over Sergt. Maxie Starr and has chalked up six kayoes in his last eight pro bouts.

Perry has been told by his manager, Harry Garsch, that if he wins Tuesday he may land a spot on a Madison Square Garden card.

Bears Defeat Detroit, 40 to 34

Detroit, Dec. 10.—Washington's Lichtman Bears had the easiest game of their Western trip here tonight, defeating the Detroit pro basketball aggregation, 40-34, after leading all the way. Johnny Isaacs came to the fore in the scoring for the first time in the Western trip, with 14 points. The Bears' success here gave them six out of the eight games they played on the Western swing.

The Bears will return to their home court, Turner's Arena, with a game against the Paterson, N. J., pros at 6 p. m., Sunday.

'Skins Given Hard Practice In Cold Rain

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

If the Redskins thought the cold rain of yesterday morning would curtail the practice session they were mistaken, for Coach Dutch Bergman ran the squad through a two-hour workout at Griffith Stadium, sparing only the players who were suffering with colds or injuries.

The session was the first workout of the week of any length and after an hour's defensive drill against Giant plays, Bergman and Turk Edwards led two teams up and down the field, Sammy Baugh running the first stringers, or what's left of them, and George Cafego the second team.

Bergman has been spending considerable time with Frank Seno, the George Washington University product who will take Wilbur Moore's place against the New Yorkers tomorrow afternoon. Seno, who one year ago was an alternate with a G. W. eleven which won only two games, may mean the difference between victory and defeat for the 'Skins who must win or tie tomorrow to clinch the Eastern Division championship.

Counting on Seno

Seno is one of several of the second-string players who Bergman is counting on against the Giants. George Cafego, who has played only three minutes in two games since he was the idol of the Redskin fans for leading the team to a 21-to-7 triumph over the Chicago Bears, will alternate with Sammy Baugh. Alex Piasecky and Ted Lapka must fill in at end for Bob Masterson, Ken Hayden will start at center, and Bergman may give Frank Akins a chance to work in the backfield. Joe Gibson may have to give Ray Hare rest, as a cut on Hare's big toe of his right foot makes it painful for him to run hard any length of time.

In New York Coach Steve Owen played a psychological trick on the Giants. Between the time the squad left the dressing room for the morning workout and the time they returned, Owen posted a clipping from a Chicago sports page on the bulletin board in the Polo Grounds dressing room, headed, "Bears Convinced They Will Play Redskins, Not Giants."

Natural Assumption

It worked, according to Owen, as the boys whipped up quite a lather over the story. Why, we don't know, as it is perfectly natural for the Bears, who beat the Giants 56 to 7, to think they will play the Redskins after this Redskin-Giant series is over, for after all the Redskins beat the Bears, 21-7, going away.

Owen was reported pleased with the physical and mental condition of the squad as it prepared for the second game with the Redskins.

Social Note—President George Marshall of the Redskins entertained the team members at a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday afternoon, an annual affair . . . Irv Comp, the Green Bay rookie, has tied Sammy Baugh with a new league record of 10 pass interceptions . . . The Giants will be quartered at the Willard Hotel upon arrival this afternoon. . . Pro Football Commissioner Elmer Layden will also arrive at the Willard late this afternoon from Chicago . . . The Redskins have five players in the league's first 15 pass receivers, Joe Aguirre, Wilbur Moore, Andy Farkas, Bob Masterson and Bob Seymour, with Aguirre second to Hutson in the number of passes caught . . . The Giants hope Owner Marshall sits on the players' bench Sunday. Coach Owen says. "When I saw him down there last Sunday, I knew we had the game won."

Officials Flip Coin

Officials of the Redskins and Giants teams will meet in Clark Griffith's office at the stadium at 1 p. m. Sunday to flip a coin which will decide the site of the playoff game in the event the Giants win the Sunday game and thus tie the 'Skins. Football Commissioner Elmer Layden will provide the coin and supervise the flip.

Jockey Joe Pannell's Death Called Accident

JOCKEY PANNELL

MRS. PANNELL

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 10.—"An unavoidable accident" was the verdict of an investigation conducted here this morning of the three-horse spill yesterday that resulted in the death of Apprentice Jockey Joseph M. Pannell, 19, of Avondale, Pa. Pannell died instantly from a broken neck when his mount, Five-O-Four, fell at the clubhouse turn, piling up two other horses, Inmate ridden by Jockey Vincent Bracciale and Purport ridden by Jockey Ken Robertson.

The investigation was conducted by Thomas C. Bradley, steward representing the West Virginia Racing Commission and Carl O. Schmidt and Frank Brooke, members of the West Virginia Racing Commission.

The following statement was issued: "After hearing all testimony, it was the opinion of this group that the accident was an unavoidable one. There was no evidence of rough riding or interference with the horse Five-O-Four (Pannell's mount) which was first to fall."

The seven jockeys who rode in the race were questioned. This lineup included Carson Kirk, Danny Scocca, Ken Robertson, Eddie Delpino, Frank Sheaffer, Vincent Bracciale and Leon Garrett. Patrol Judge Charles Gormley, stationed at the turn; J. T. Harris, trainer of Five-O-Four, and newspapermen also testified.

Testimony showed that Pannell's mount ran up on the heels of Janegri, causing him to fall. Purport and Inmate then fell over Five-O-Four. Jockeys Kirk, Sheaffer and Scocca said that they knew nothing of the spill until they came through the stretch in the finish. Scocca, who rode Janegri, testified that he did not feel any horse strike his mount. Delpino, who rode Upsetting, reported that he saw Five-O-Four "get clicked by Janegri's heels when Pannell drove up on the inside."

Garrett, aboard Gino T said his horse jumped over Purport and Inmate. Bracciale, who fell with Inmate, testified he was racing along on the outside of Purport and was trying to keep his horse "from lagging in" when he saw Five-O-Four going down. Ken Robertson, who fell with Purport, testified that he didn't see anything and that when his mount fell he did not know Purport was tripping over fallen horses.

Patrol Judge Gormley, the official closest to the accident, said Five-O-Four appeared to bounce off the fence, causing him to run up on Janegri's heels. Asked if he had observed Pannell's riding, Gormley said the boy "loose-reined horses." This statement was borne out by other riders and officials. It was also brought out that Five-O-Four once had run out and crashed into the outside fence at the same turn and on another occasino had fallen.

The investigation failed to disclose more than hearsay evidence that there had been any effort to "get even with Pannell" because of the boy's statement to a Maryland Racing Commissioner that Jockey M. Quinn had offered him $150 to "pull" a horse at Marlboro.

Any Camp Davis soldier will quickly point out that Mellus made better than 50 per cent of the team's tackles. The ex-Villanova giant was also adept at blocking punts and a prime mover in off-tackle slants.

Bray, the heaviest man on the squad at 225, was like a stone wall on defense, as all Del Monte Preflight opponents will admit. When his team had the ball and needed yardage, all the Coast backs had to do was follow Ray, and they made what they needed.

When it comes to ends, any coach would settle for Fitch and Russell. The right-handed, left-footed Fitch averaged better than 50 yards a kick, was a fine defensive blocker and pass receiver. When the foe had the ball, Bob was constantly in the enemy backfield making tackle after tackle.

Russell was All-Southwest Conference end at Baylor last year and was even better playing for Blackland Army Air Field. It was Jack who was in Dobbs' hair all afternoon when Randolph Field had its toughest opposition. On the offense, Russell often went back to carry the ball in end-around plays and seldom was stopped.

Terrific Backfield

Now for the backfield of Dobbs, Eshmont, Todd and Smith. All the boys were terrific ball carriers and play stoppers. Glenn continued his All-American passing and kicking. Even when he was injured, the former Tulsa heaver continued to throw touchdown forwards and Randolph Field was unbeatable with him in there.

Eshmont and Todd have always been rated among the top broken field runners and they continue to improve despite many years of football. Lenny was everything to Del Monte while Dick made the Seahawks ground game a devastating weapon.

Bernie Bierman, now at San Diego, says Smith is the greatest all-round back he has ever seen and Bruce has certainly proved it.

Kirk Scores Double at Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 10. Chiefly because it afforded Carson Kirk the opportunity to score a saddle double for the afternoon and, furthermore, because it furnished a gathering of some 2500 with a thrilling finish, the fifth race at Charles Town today served as the feature. Under able handling by Kirk, who had previously won with Gay Elf in the second race, E. E. Miller's Darby Dallas accomplished a close victory in that event to reward at odds of 11 to 10.

Covering the "about seven furlongs" in 1:26 3-5, the Ohio-bred son of Tommy Boy overpowered the pace-setting Double B turning for home to achieve a half length score. Although forced to relinquish his advantage Double B held on doggedly and at the end was seven lengths in front of Granny Cake.

Darby Dallas took a "lucky" decision. It was solely due to Kirk being able to drive his mount through an opening early that the gelding was able to reach a contending position and eventually converge on the leaders in the rundown the backstretch. Once this was accomplished and the ultimate winner was alongside the leading Double B it was merely a matter of time before the latter would give way. Approaching the stretch turn Double B began shortening his stride with the result that Darby Dallas was able to wear him down.

War Jobs Get Dads Preferred Draft Status

tributions in war production or in support of the war effort are usually stable employes," Hershey advised draft boards, "and if other factors are equal, will normally be accorded deferment in preference to nonfathers."

Simultaneously, he ordered a continuous review of deferred classifications "to the end that no nonfather shall continue in a deferred status longer than required by the national interest."

By a curious legislative turn, the most important provision of the new law became one wresting control over the Selective Service System from Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt and reestablishing Selective Service as an independent agency, subject only to President Roosevelt.

No immediate information was available on the relationships that will be established between Selective Service and WMC, but close associates of McNutt indicated that the manpower chief would not resign his post, even though he regarded enactment of the measure as a "slap in the face."

WMC officials expressed the belief that an April, 1942, executive order giving McNutt advisory powers over Selective Service occupational deferment policies remained on the books, thus permitting continued coordination of military and civilian manpower policies. With the agencies separated, however, it appeared that any disputes arising under the order would have to be referred to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes for settlement.

Other provisions of the new law include:

1. Outlawing of WMC's "work or fight" order inducting men employed in certain "nondeferable" occupations regardless of their order numbers or dependency status. McNutt yesterday rescinded the order and Hershey so advised the Nation's 6500 local draft boards by telegram.

2. Mandatory review of occupational deferments by the appeals board having jurisdiction over a registrant's place of employment in cases where they are registered with out-of-town draft boards. Hershey said that instructions to that effect are being prepared.

3. Establishment of a five-man medical commission to examine the "physical, mental and moral qualification requirements for admission to the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, and recommended to the President any changes therein which they believe can be made without impairing the efficiency of the armed services." The five, to be appointed by the President must include an Army and Navy medical officer, and three civilian physicians not connected with the Government.

4. Granting of preinduction examinations where feasible so that registrants may know in advance whether they will be rejected for physical reasons.

New regulations issued by Hershey modified existing practice somewhat by setting up two classes of inductible men—so-called nonfathers, and pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, instead of the existing four classes—single men, men with collateral dependents, married men without pre-Pearl Harbor children, and married men with pre-Pearl Harbor children.

Fathers may not be taken until the available supply of nonfathers is exhausted, but the supply of nonfathers each month (from youths turning 18, and as a result of expiration of occupational deferments, and reexamination of those rejected for physical reasons) are not expected to be sufficient to meet calls. Hershey has estimated that about one million fathers will be inducted by June 30, 1944.

The regulation made clear that the liquidation of Class III-A (by reclassifying registrants into I-A, II-A, II-B and III-D as appropriate) is to continue, making additional fathers available for induction.

8000 D. C. Dads Face Induction by June 30

District Selective Service officials estimated yesterday that 8000 Washington fathers will be inducted by June 30, 1944.

William E. Leahy, District draft director, estimated that only one-quarter to one-third of the monthly calls would be made up of nonfathers—including 350 youths reaching 18 each month, and those whose occupational deferments expire.

Board of Pharmacy and of the District Pharmaceutical Society issued a plea to citizens to be more patient about getting prescriptions made up. He said requests were being met, but that pharmacists were working at top rate and could not give immediate attention to all.

Pharmacists were caught short of stocks and unable to make up their lack at first because gas shortage restrictions allow wholesale deliveries only twice weekly, he said.

Quinine, he noted, has been requisitioned by the Army and Navy, but added that all other drugs were on hand.

Baroness von Trapp To Discuss "Family"

Rosa Welch Offers Tones Of Quality

By Ray C. B. Brown

Twelfth Street Christian Church presents Rosa Page Welch in a song recital on Friday night in Lincoln Temple Congregational Church. Accompanist: Mary L. Europe. Program of songs by Bach, Stradella, Secchi, Haydn, Ponchielli, Mednikov, Grechaninov, Saminski, Cherniavski, Schubert, Franz, MacGimsey, Price, Wolf and Leoni.

Singing last evening in Lincoln Temple Congregational Church, Rosa Page Welch made an agreeable impression of earnestness and sincerity in the use of a mezzo-soprano voice. There is promise in her simplicity of approach to her art, and in a quality of tone that is now at its best in an open and resonant attack, and in the clarity of the full upper notes.

Her reading of Bach's "My Heart Ever Faithful" showed a knowledge of phrase values and a justness in intonation. In Stradella's "Pieta, Signore" portamenta was freely used for dramatic effect and not always to the best advantage. Secchi's "Lungi dal caro bene" was much more carefully linked in legato, as was Haydn's "She Never Told Her Love."

For an operatic aria, she offered "Voce di donna" from "La Gioconda" which had forcefulness and dignity. A group of songs by Russian composers contained Mednikov's "The Hills of Gruzia," Grechaninov's "Thou Art an Angel Earthward Bending," Saminski's "L'Agneau de la Petite Sarah" and Cherniavski's "Kalinka." A group of lieder by Schubert and Franz was followed by three Negro spirituals, Wolf's "Iris," Leoni's "Birth of Morn" and the old English "Have You Seen But a Whyte Lily Grow."

National Capitol Artists' Bureau presents Aubrey Pankey in a song recital on Friday night in Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church. Program of songs by Handel, Caccini, Peri, Schubert, Curran, Chaikovski, Quilter, Guuion, Wagner, Dett, Burleigh and Brown.

Report has it that Nathaniel Dett and Roland Hayes encouraged Aubrey Pankey to train the baritone voice that he displayed agreeably last evening in Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church. Their advice was well founded, for he has made considerable adancement in both lyric and dramatic interpretation. The voice is steadily controlled throughout. He sings with a sense of phrasing and an instinct for the right emotional stress.

His opening classical group contained the unusual item of an arin, "Invocacione de Orfeo," by one of the earliest Italian operatic composers, Jacopo Peri. This was associated with Handel's familiar "Where'er You Walk" and Caccini's "Amarilli." Variety of treatment was accorded four lieder by Schubert, and a miscellaneous group brought together Pearl Curran's "Life," Chaikovski's "None But the Lonely Heart," Roger Quilter's "It Was a Lover and His Lass" and David Guion's "The Voice of America."

"O du mein holder Abendstern" from "Tannhaeuser" preceded a group of Negro spirituals: "A Man Goin' Round Takin' Names," "Stand Still, Jordan," "Lord, I Want to be a Christian" and "Follow Me."

Peoples Drug Sales Up 2.2% During Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Sales of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., continued to level off in November, showing a gain of only 2.2 per cent over the same month last year.

Reporting this yesterday, Treasurer W. H. Churchill said that November dollar volume was $2,878,088 as compared with $2,816,822 in the same 1942 month. The narrower sales gains noted in the past two months were attributed to difficulty in replenishing stocks in certain staples.

However, sales for the first 11 months reached the record total of $30,947,754, or 7.9 per cent greater than the $28,691,054 in the corresponding period last year.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 10 (AP).—Grains rose sharply today on rumors that ceilings on hard wheat now expected some time next week, would be higher than traders had anticipated. All wheat contracts advanced to new seasonal peaks, with the December delivery hitting its best level since 1925. Gains extending to a cent and more were established by other grains.

Final prices were down slightly from the day's best, but wheat held on to gains of 1⅝ to 1⅞. December 1.69⅛@1.69. Oats were up ¼ to 1¼, December 82. Rye was ahead ⅞ to 1⅛, December 1.19½, and barley was ⅝ to 2½ higher, December 1.25½.

Select Issues Push Higher In Uneven List

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The stock market today whipped up a selective rally behind farm implements, mail orders, gold mines and industrial blue chips.

The list got off to an uneven start but firm bidding soon stiffened quotations generally with activity brisk during the third hour. Best gains ranged from 1 to 5 points for favorites. These were reduced in most cases at the close as dealings slowed.

A revival of inflation thinking, spurred by a brisk upturn in grains and an expansion of money in circulation to a record peak above 20 billion dollars, inspired some buying of securities. Further drying up of year-end tax selling, together with reinvestment demand from those who had made adjustments for income statements, served as a bolstering influence.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up .4 of a point at 49.1. Transfers totaled 866,540 shares compared with 856,430 the day before.

Railway medium-rated bonds did well. At Chicago, wheat was up 1⅛ to 1⅝ cents a bushel, oats ¼ to 1¼ and rye ⅞ to 1½. Cotton was up 25 to 75 cents a bale.

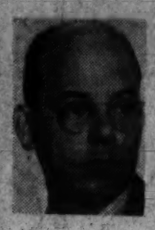
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Scientists Recognized For Their War Work

The Nation's scientists are being recognized for their war work. Nearly 10,000 of them, mobilized for war by the Office of Scientific Research and Development, will be given diplomas to certify they are performing vital war work. The diplomas are sent to the scientists by the Committee of Scientific Research Personnel of the War Manpower Commission and they are signed by high Army, Navy, WPB, WMC and officials in the Government scientific agencies. The purpose behind the diplomas is to (1) lift morale so draft-age scientists will feel they're doing their bit, (2) stabilize employment, as the scientists agree not to change jobs without notifying the committee, and (3) to assist draft boards in classifying scientists.



House action on the Senate-approved bill which would raise the annuities of retired employes by 15 per cent can be expected to be delayed until after the first of the year. However, it's a good bet that the House will follow the Senate and approve the bill. The Civil Service Commission is now backing the measure. It originally opposed the legislation. Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee also has been against the bill but yesterday he had a long talk with a group that is urging its passage. After all, Congress just a few weeks ago increased veterans pensions by 15 per cent.

Steno Shortage?

LETTER—It has come to my attention that the War Department is "short" of stenographers; that practically any means are to be used to secure more of them; that the shortage is critical, and that the war could be lost through the lack of stenos and the paper work left undone.

Why? The reason is elementary. A steno can reach a CAF-3 grade without too much fuss. Sometimes they can reach a CAF-4 grade, though this is rarer and usually involves a goodly amount of interviewing and confusion. But the clerk doesn't have all this trouble. For some reason clerical work, which demands much less training and skill, is graded higher and a reallocation in the clerical grade is far easier to obtain.

These are the facts in my own section: Two months ago we had 29 stenos below the CAF-5 rating. Four had CAF-4's, the remainder were 2's and 3's no matter what their real worth. The chief had a CAF-5 rating, making 30 of us in all. This distribution of grades wasn't set up in the section; it came from higher up. Now there are 22 of us, but the section is richer by 8 clerks. These 8 clerks all got a grade raise when they transferred from stenogs to clerks and, as it is their right, prefer to do no stenographic work at all. Why should they endanger their raise?

I'd like to have a grade raise and I could get one if I was transferred to a clerk's job. Only the CAF-2's have any chance for a promotion and I'm a CAF-4. But I want to remain a steno. I feel that a steno can handle responsible work (and that includes clerical duties) without giving up her typewriter and possibly her best chance at livelihood after the war. I'm merely asking that Uncle Sam look closer to home instead of searching all over the country for untrained help.

The rating system has created a synthetic shortage of stenos and that seems to be the unanswerable proof that the system is wrong. Correct the system to give stenos an equal opportunitw for promotions and you'll have a flood of trained stenos back on the job.

Editor's note: The Civil Service Commission is interested in this problem. This and other letters citing similar situations will be turned over to the commission and perhaps stenographers will be given higher ratings if sufficient evidence is presented.

Holiday Travel Ban

The canceling of annual leave during the Christmas holidays at the suggestion of the Office of Defense Transportation is boomeranging. It's now quite apparent to everyone that thousands of employes are going home anyway and they can do it and still not violate the order. They are leaving before December 17 and returning after January 10, or else they are leaving Christmas Eve and will return here Monday morning, December 27. Some employes will be taking more leave than they intended and the others will make an all-time traffic jam on Christmas weekend. Still others will resign so they can be home. Wouldn't it be more sensible to grant leave before the 23rd and after the 27th?

Poll Shows Parents Oppose Portable Schools

A poll of parents in the North Randle area indicates that the majority prefer their children attend the Kimble School on a two-shift basis rather than go full time in portable frame buildings called "unfit for use."

As a result of the survey, authorities will study proposed abandonment of the portables, located at Minnesota ave. and E st. se., as recommended by the North Randle Citizens Association.

Restaurant Grading Bill Reported Out

A bill empowering the Commissioners to grade restaurants on a basis of sanitary standards and six other District measures yesterday were reported favorably by the Senate District Committee, meeting in executive session.

The restaurant grading bill received several minor amendments following the report of a subcommittee headed by Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisana, which held extensive hearings on the matter. The changes reduced the maximum penalty for violations from $1000 to $500 or imprisonment up to 90 days, or both.

Protest Voted Down

It was revealed that after the subcommittee report, the Commissioners sent a letter to the District Committee opposing restaurant grading. The protest was voted down, however, because members felt that it was a matter for congressional decision.

Other bills reported favorably would:

Provide for clearance of land titles after tax deed sales for nonpayment of taxes;

Amend the District insurance code to permit maximum fines of $200 for violations instead of license suspension or revocation;

Approve the corporation of Providence Hospital;

Change the name of Conduit rd. on the Maryland side of the District Line to MacArthur Boulevard, thus conforming to the change already made in the District;

Pipe-Laying Permission

Grant permission to the Mayflower Hotel to install steam-heating pipes beneath the streets, already approved by the House;

Give the superintendent of insurance control over fire and casualty rates.

Two other House-approved measures were referred to subcommittee action, for which the members of the subcommittees have not yet been named. One would make valid the driving permits of service personnel, and the other would bring the District program of aid to dependent children into compliance with Federal Social Security Board rules.

Judge Quinn Rules Maghan Must Be Tried

Judge Thomas D. Quinn ruled yesterday in Municipal Court that Robert J. Maghan, jr., must stand trial on a charge of drunkenness which resulted in his suspension from the Metropolitan Police Department.

Immediately after this ruling was made, there was a conference at the bench. Then Judge Quinn announced that he had been asked to disqualify himself on prejudice grounds, but that he would not do so. The request was made by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin, who is to file an affidavit to that effect on Monday.

Laughlin sought to have the information on which the arrest was made declared invalid, stating the arrest was a frame-up, and an attempt to affect the suit Maghan filed against various District officials. He charged he was illegally transferred from the rank of detective sergeant to private. It was shortly after this occurred that Maghan was charged with being drunk on a lot at Banks and M sts. nw.

Called by Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward W. Thomas, Policeman Linwood S. Jones, the arresting officer, testified Maghan was lying on the front seat of his automobile when the arrest was made. Jones said Maghan was not informed by him that he was under arrest.

At one point in the hearing, Laughlin said he had subpenaed his arch rival, Attorney Charles E. Ford, as a defense witness and asked that he be excluded from the courtroom. Ford calmly stood up, said Laughlin had once before subpenaed him in another case, and then Ford had waited in the witness room for three days without ever being called to the witness stand. Judge Quinn ruled that Ford might stay in the courtroom. The purpose of this procedure could not be ascertained.

Henry Creates Wild Scene In Courtroom

By Joseph Paull

"Pilate, Pilate—hear him. Pilate's there," screamed Jeffries D. Henry, 36, convicted of the second-degree murder of his 26-year-old wife, as he appeared yesterday in District Court for sentencing by Justice Matthew F. McGuire.

The former policeman and father of five children was brought into the courtroom by two marshals. His bronze hair was disheveled.

He stomped and staggered throught the room, past the gate at the rail. He fell, grasping the rail and panting. He waved his arms in the general direction of Justice McGuire, who had not said a word.

"Pilate, Pilate—hear him. Pilate's there. The Pharisees, Pharisees; look, listen to them. Do you hear them screaming? He thinks——"

The marshals grappled with Henry and he fell to the floor. As he was dragged to the door, he grabbed a coat rack and was on the verge of throwing it when he was finally subdued.

Justice McGuire then called Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin and defense attorney J. Bernard Flaherty to the bench.

After the conference, Justice McGuire announced:

"In view of the spectacle here, I want to direct you, Mr. Heflin, to have the defendant placed under observation for the purpose of determining his condition. When he is fit, he will be brought here for sentencing."

It was learned later that Henry has refused food at the District Jail for the past two days. He is reported to have periodically kicked the walls of his cell and to have barked:

"See those dead bodies. For God's sake, take them out of here."

Jail physicians last night said Henry was resting quietly.

Last week a jury found Henry killed his second wife, Lola Jane, 26, after arranging an appointment with her in a 13th st. nw. restaurant-drug store. Henry fired one shot into his wife, killing her almost instantly, and then one at his own heart. This bullet, however, was deflected by a rib.

Henry's defense was that he was temporarily insane at the time of the slaying and that he remembered nothing.

Scouts to Hunt Untapped Paper Sources

Boy Scouts and Cubs in the Washington area yesterday were called upon by their scout executive, Linn C. Drake, to "assist in alleviating a national emergency"—by soliciting and collecting waste paper from untapped sources in their sections.

Organization of the intensified drive, which is sponsored by the Washington Post in cooperation with the D. C. Salvage Committee, began this week. The scouts will be wholly responsible for carrying on the duration campaign, designed to bring in paper salvage neglected in previous programs.

Drake, in a letter to scout leaders, pointed out that the drive is a "specific and patriotic obligation that each member of our Boy Scout organization should immediately assume."

The program must be put into effect immediately, he asserted, asking troops to set up accumulation depots so that first collections by District Salvage Committee trucks may be made a week from today.

Meanwhile, registration blanks with full instruction details are being mailed to all troop masters. Participation blanks for paper donors to sign also are being distributed.

111 Tenants File Eviction Protest Here

Charging "monetary greed" in an attempt to evade the rent control laws, 111 tenants threatened with eviction from three apartment buildings at 2618, 2620 and 2622 13th st. nw., yesterday filed a complaint with District Rent Administrator Robert Cogswell against the Fidelity Mortgage Investment Co., owner of the property.

Although the buildings are "occupied to capacity," with "most of the tenants warworkers," a statement to Cogswell said, the company was preparing to remodel the present five-room apartments into smaller units. This move was held by Col. O. R. McGuire, counsel for the tenants, to be an attempt to raise rents now controlled by rent ceilings.

Notified of Plans

The company, he said, had notified tenants five weeks ago that it was negotiating with the National Housing Agency for the latter to lease the buildings and convert the apartments for warworkers. The present occupants would have to move to make way for the rebuilding, they were allegedly informed, although, according to Colonel McGuire, no "actual" arrangements had been concluded between NHA and the proprietor company.

Reached for comment last night, an NHA spokesman said records indicated that through conversion the present 18 5-room apartments now housing 22 families and numerous roomers in the 3 buildings could be rebuilt to house 42 families.

Tenants Are Roomers

"The urgent need is for more homes for families of warworkers," it was stated. "Many of the 111 tenants living there now are roomers who could easily find accommodation in existing vacancies," the spokesman pointed out, while the additional apartments resulting from conversion would provide living quarters to warworkers' families now inadequately housed.

However, NHA will not negotiate a lease to reconstruct the buildings until the Fidelity Mortgage Investment Co. can find other housing for the present tenants, it was stated.

J. F. Crowell, vice president of the company, said last night he had no idea at this point where the matter stood.

Six Injured As Traffic Toll Mounts to 87

D. C. deaths this year.....87
Deaths this date last year..101
District total last year.....108

Four children, two sets of brothers, and two other persons were injured in traffic crashes yesterday as a coroner's autopsy determined Mrs. Mary E. Roat, 70, who died at Alexandria Hospital, Thursday, succumbed from injuries suffered in a local automobile accident.

Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, raises the District fatality toll to 87 for this year. A resident of 316 Maryland ave. ne., Mrs. Roat was hurt at 1st st. and Maryland ave. ne., Monday.

Condition Undetermined

Two boys and their grandmother were admitted to Casualty Hospital last night in undetermined condition following a two-car accident at 14th and Monroe sts. ne.

Mrs. Matilda B. Reynolds, 59, suffered a broken left thigh and shoulder and the boys, Harry and Richard Rusk, 6 and 4, respectively, were treated for head injuries. They live at 1345 Oak st. nw.

Police said the victims were riding with the boys' father, John W. Rusk, 36, when their automobile was in collision with one operated by Herbert B. Armstrong, jr., 17, of Hyattsville, Md. The latter was unhurt.

Minor Injuries

Ernest Thomas Ryan, 4, and his brother William A. Ryan, 2, were treated at Providence Hospital yesterday afternoon for minor injuries suffered when a car driven by their father, Samuel Ernest Ryan, 7447 Walker Mill rd. se., collided with a truck in the 2300 block of Pennsylvania ave. se.

Edward B. Preis, 50, of 23 2d st. ne., was admitted to Casualty Hospital yesterday after being hit by an auto at 2d and F sts. nw. Police said the car was driven by Paul S. South, 25, of 221 20th st. ne., and that the victim had possible internal injuries.

Stick to Facts, Ihlder Demands In Assailing Critics of NCHA

Urging frank discussion of public housing as a subject of major importance, John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, yesterday demanded that critics of NCHA stick to "accurate statements of fact."

In a formal statement directed to the housing committee of the Southeast Council of Citizens Association, whose chairman, Joseph Deckman, recently urged Congress to "investigate" NCHA, at a meeting of the Federation of Citizens Association whose housing committee Deckman also heads, Ihlder implied that the attacks of this and other groups on public housing were possibly prompted by "certain interests."

"Whether or not there should be public housing is a subject of major importance and should be discussed on the basis of frank and accurate statement of fact," he declared.

The attack, he said, "assumes that public housing will not be needed in the critical postwar period that confronts us, when the problem of unemployment may be even more serious than it was in the early 1930's and when slum reclamation may become doubly important . . . We must wonder at the apparent lack of information (prompting this attack)," Ihlder declared.

The NCHA has repeatedly asked an evaluation of its work by such "non-official" agencies as the Board of Trade, the Real Estate Board and the Washington Building Congress as a "means by which the authority may present and discuss its whole program with representatives of District residents," Ihlder pointed out.

Because of the "expressed wishes of the people," for example, NCHA recently withdrew plans to build a low-cost project on Savannah ave. in the Southeast area of Washington, he said.

But the authority "has a public responsibility," Ihlder stated, along with its policy "to give a hearing to the objectors," and "reckless allegations" against it will not serve the public interest, he said.

Kutz, Member of Commission, Is Engineering Expert for D.C.

(The fourth article of a series—Aprimer of District government.)

By Hanson H. Hathaway

Oldest of the three District Commissioners and the one whose background and training appear to qualify the man thoroughly for the job he is holding is Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz. Brigadier General Kutz, U. S. Army Engineer Corps, is 73.

GEN. KUTZ

Whatever the District has today in good streets, in an efficient water supply, in sanitation and sewage and the hundred and one things that keep a metropolis going, are attributed to a large extent to the Army engineer.

He was first appointed in 1914, and after a year's interruption, was reappointed in 1918 to serve for three years. He was brought out of retirement and appointed to the job again in 1941.

Inspects Projects

During his three terms, Kutz has kept in intimate touch with the four major departments under his supervision and their 27 separate functions. In contrast to Commissioners Young and Mason, there are few employes working inside the District Building or out in the field offices and projects who do not know him by sight.

This is due to his unvarying habit of leaving his home at 8 o'clock every morning to make a two-hour inspection tour of projects under way in different parts of the city.

Kutz arrives at his office by 10 a. m. Part District official, part Federal employe, and also an active Army officer, he serves on the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, is a member of the Zoning Commission, and of the Public Utilities and Unemployment Commissions.

He is a West Point graduate and has held the posts of district engineer of the Ohio River division of rivers and harbors, member of the Mississippi River Commission, and in 1928 he was chief engineer of the Hawaiian department of the Army. Stationed at Honolulu, he made first-hand studies of city sanitation and municipal engineering problems.

Has Scientist's View

After eight years as District Engineer Commissioner, Colonel Kutz has the scientist's view of the District he serves. He sees city engineering as a doctor sees the human body.

"No city lives without people," he reflected, "and no people can live where conditions are not maintained for living."

Commissioner Kutz prefers to keep in the background.

"I am," he says, "an Army engineer on duty again after 11 years of retirement."

He has the bars of the Croix de Guerre and the Legion of Honor.

Lawyers to Engage In Poking Fun, at Annual Banquet

Members of the legal fraternity here were rehearsing last night for what was announced by the District Bar Association as its "first speechless dinner and an entire evening of buffoonery and lampoonery."

The annual banquet tonight will be held at the Mayflower Hotel and corporation lawyer and ambulance chasers are invited to leave their dignity at home. The lawyers will act in "Uncle Sam's Minstrels" to poke fun at the guests including the United States Supreme Court.

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran is toastmaster, and Milton W. King, bar association president, will make a few remarks, which—as the lawyers put it—are on information and belief alleged to be funny.

Builders Will Meet

Changes in the Master Builders' Association constitution and by-laws will be discussed at a meeting in the Mayflower Hotel at 6 p. m. Tuesday.

D.C.-Annapolis Link Proposed For After War

Gov. Herbert O'Conor yesterday announced he would present to the Maryland Highway Commission a proposal to build a four-lane high-speed highway between Annapolis, Md., and the District, after the war.

Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the State Roads Commission, has suggested to the Governor that the road run from the west end of the Severn River Bridge westward across the Naval Academy golf course, thus by-passing the center of Annapolis, and then connect with the Defense highway in the vicinity of Bestgate. A connection also would be made with the Solomons Island road to Camp Parole.

The project, Whitman stated, would allow for further extension to the District line on a location lying generally between the existing Defense highway and Central ave. The first route enters the District by way of Bladensburg and the second line through Seat Pleasant.

The Governor explained that the improvement of Central ave. from its junction with the Solomons Island road will be completed to provide for a satisfactory highway of 24-foot width into Washington through Seat Pleasant.

Second Victim

'Note Bandit' Binds Woman And Takes $9

Mrs. Margaret Lillie, 62, of 607 4th st. nw., reported to police yesterday that she was bound, gagged and robbed of $9 at her home after being warned in a note handed her by an unidentified Negro at her door, to keep quiet.

Mrs. Lillie said she answered the door at her home yesterday morning and the man handed her a note which said:

"Do not cry out. I have a gun."

She said he then forced her into the front room of the house and tied her to a chair and gagged her, and then took the money from the place.

She was found later by Thomas St. Clair, 15, of the same address, who heard her call after she had succeeded in freeing herself of the gag.

In a similar case, police said, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, of 49 I st. nw., reported that had been robbed November 28. She also was bound, gagged and robbed.

In both instances the man is said to have assured his victims that he would call police to free them. In neither case did he keep his promise, however.

Two Sentenced, One Not Guilty in Criminal Verdicts

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of District Court imposed yesterday 3 to 9 years' imprisonment on Irma V. Jackson, 27, Negro, of 2723 11th st. nw., who was found guilty of embezzling more than $1200 from the Elite Laundry, where she was a messenger and maid.

John F. Diggs, 24, of 727 12th st. ne., was sentenced to 18 months to 4 years' imprisonment by Justice David A. Pine who found him guilty of a "yoke robbery," where a pocketbook containing $54 was taken.

Arline Dennis, 34, Negro, of 26 1 st. ne., was found innocent of the manslaughter of her husband, Harvey J. Dennis, 32, Negro, who was knifed.

Restaurateur Is Held

Charged with slinging a pail of grease at Ellsworth Ellis, 28, Negro, of 1342 Riggs st. ne., Jung Sang Wong, 33, restaurant operator at 1427 P st. nw., was held yesterday for grand jury action. Bond was set at $500 by Judge Walter J. Casey.

Cadet Nurses Face Payless Yule Season

More than 100 student nurses at St, Elizabeths Hospital have not been paid since the first part of November, it was learned last night. Unless the Comptroller General's office acts promptly they will face Christmas with empty pocketbooks.

They have missed two semi-monthly paydays already, and many of them are broke and embarrassed. Some report they expect to have to borrow money with which to meet obligations if relief does not come soon.

The cessation of pay came after the institution received its allotment under the Bolton Act providing funds for cadet nurses, according to Superintendent Winfred Overholser.

Federally Supported

St. Elizabeths is the only nurses' training school supported by Federal funds, except Freedmen's Hospital, whose financing is slightly different. Trainees at St. Elizabeths in the past were paid with civil service money. They received overtime pay on a civil service basis. Since allocation of the Bolton funds, which permit monthly allowances of $15 in the case of students, hospital authorities were faced with the question of which category to place the students in. The question was in effect which or what Federal funds to use to pay its psychiatric students and the students from affiliated hospitals who train there.

The problems were summarized and sent to the Comptroller General about a month ago it was learned. However, no reply has been received. Comptroller General Lindsay Warren was ill with the flu last night and could not be reached at his home.

No Criticism of Bolton Act

Dr. Overholser said it was embarrassing to the hospital to have the nurses unhappy, especially at Christmas, but pointed out that if funds were paid illegally the certifying officers would be held responsible and they could hardly afford that.

The present situation is no criticism of the Bolton Act, he said, because the St. Elizabeths position is unique. But, he maintained, a decision must be made by the Comptroller General before funds can be paid. If some minor amendment were necessary, after that decision, Dr. Overholser said he felt sure Congress would grant it "because we are all back of the Bolton Act."

Plans Drawn For New Clinic At Gallinger

The old wooden buildings used at Gallinger Hospital for part of the tuberculosis ward will be demolished as soon as a modern out-patient clinic is constructed, Commissioner Guy L. Mason announced yesterday. This would probably be next summer, it was indicated.

At present, all patients have been taken out of the structures, and one is used as an outpatient clinic while others are being used temporarily for the storage of supplies and equipment, he said.

He said the wooden out-patient building would be abandoned as soon as the new one could be constructed, and that plans are now being drawn for it while the Commissioners are asking money for the structure in the 1945 appropriation bill. These funds would be available next July.

Razing of the buildings was recommended by the Senate subcommittee which investigated Gallinger Hospital last fall, and the patients housed there were removed to Glenn Dale Sanatorium and the new tuberculosis section of the main building.

Two More Dogs Discovered Rabid In District

The Health Department yesterday reported two more dogs found rabid after a lull of two weeks in the current epidemic during which no new cases were found. As far as is known, no one was bitten by these dogs.

One was picked up Thursday in the 3600 block of S st. nw.

The other, found in the 600 block of North Carolina ave. se., died on November 20. A report on him delayed pending a test which was completed yesterday.

Meanwhile, Health Officer George C. Ruhland cautioned citizens to maintain vigilance in keeping their pets off the streets and having them examined if they show peculiar symptoms. Animals and humans may develop the disease as much as three months after the initial infection, he said.

Yesterday's report brings the number of rabid animals found in the District since last May, when the epidemic started, to 93.

Police Decide 'Dead' Man Was Just 'Dead' Drunk

The Fire Department rescue squad got a thrill last night. It happened like this:

Police of the 10th Precinct had received a call to 14th and Irving st. nw., where a 40-year-old Negro man was lying in the gutter, and from all appearances dead.

The officers proceeded to make out a death report and called the rescue squad to take the "victim" to the hospital to have him pronounced dead.

Half way to the hospital the man raised up off the cot.

"Lawdy, what's all this?" he wanted to know.

Police decided that he'd just been "dead" drunk so they took him to the 10th Precinct Station on a drunkenness charge.

Pick and Shovel Method With Waffle Iron Does Not Aid Household Conservation

By Martha Ellyn

Plenty of headaches—perhaps, heartaches—can be avoided if a person knows how to get a waffle out of the iron without the aid of a crowbar or ice pick.

Many inquiries come to me asking how to make waffle irons give up the waffle readily. Following is a typical letter:

DEAR MARTHA ELLYN: I have a most unpredictable waffle iron. Sometimes I get the most wonderful results. But sometimes no matter what I do the waffles will stick. I have tried many ways to get it in the right condition—but no success. Can you suggest any method by which I can make my waffle iron more dependable. I wouldn't think of using it when I have guests, for it might cause me embarrassment. M. E. L.

The above is an all too common complaint concerning waffle irons. Here are the directions for the use and care of them:

Preheating and Baking

Use manufacturer's instructions for pretreating. If there are no instructions a nonautomatic waffle iron should be preheated, 8 to 10 minutes. The top and bottom grids should be brushed with some unsalted, melted fat. Pour into hot iron 4 tablespoons batter. Bake 2 to 3 minutes or until steam ceases. Throw away first waffle baked.

Keep your waffle iron in good condition if you want to get them out of the baker without a tug of war. Serve waffles with sausage and cream gravy made from the drippings, and so conserve the butter supply for other uses

It will not be necessary to grease or oil again.

If there is a temperature indicator on the iron, preheat and bake as indicated. If the batter is poured into the waffle iron before it is hot enough do not try to open the iron until the waffle is done, this causes the waffle to pull apart and stick. After using waffle iron, leave it open to cool.

Cleaning of Iron

A paste of water and baking soda applied with a soft dry brush removes grease and discoloration from grids. Afterward preheat grids as you did before using it the first time. Use a brush to remove crumbs. NEVER immerse the waffle iron in water. Always hang cord to waffle baker in a place where it will not tangle or knot.

Now for the waffle itself. Use a dependable recipe or the splendid waffle mix now on the market. It is necessary that the batter has sufficient shortening in it or it may stick. The following is a recipe of good proportions:

PLAIN WAFFLES

Beat 2 eggs, add 1½ cups milk, then 2 cups flour sifted with 4 teaspoons baking powder and ¾ teaspoon salt, and lastly 6 tablespoons melted shortening. Beat well and bake. Yield, four waffles.

Right down the line of conservation is the serving of sausage patties and cream gravy with waffles. When the gravy is made from the sausage drippings, butter or margarine is saved and the meat flavor is extended.

Waffles and sausage are appropriate food for the Christmas breakfast. Here is a suggested menu using these foods:

Breakfast Menu

Grapefruit With Sherry
Waffles Sausage Patties
Cream Gravy Honey
Sauted Apple Rings Coffee

If you want a not too greasy gravy, the fat and flour must be in good proportion. The following is a recipe which will yield a gravy of good consistency:

CREAM GRAVY

Measure 4 tablespoons of sausage drippings and return to the skillet. Mix 4 tablespoons flour with the drippings. Add gradually, 2 cups milk or half milk and half water, stirring constantly. Boil for 2 minutes. Yield, two cupsful.

Program Like Helen Jepson's Should Follow Visit of Stork

By Ida Jean Kain

It may come as a brand-new idea to you—but 48 hours after you have had a baby, you can start an exercise program to get back in shape. If your figure matters to you, you had better do it, too!

This is the kind of program followed by Helen Jepson, lovely Metropolitan Opera soprano, after the arrival of her son, Rickey, in September. Kwown as the "glamour girl of opera," she couldn't dally with her exercise. She asked her doctor to prescribe some miracle-workers, and I am passing them on to you. Before you try them, be sure they are what your doctor orders. Do not attempt them without his consent. The series is progressive and when one becomes too easy, stop it and go on to the next.

The first conditioners are so mild that ordinarily you wouldn't call them exercise. But they get you started and you will be stronger after doing them. As you gain in strength, you can progress to movements that take more effort—but without strain.

Lie flat on your back and raise your head until your chin rests on your chest. This exerts a light pull on the abdominal muscles. You should be able to repeat the movement from 10 to 20 times.

By the third or fourth day, you can do a deep-breathing exercise—lie flat on your back, arms down at sides, and inhale deeply. As you inhale, stretch your arms straight to sides. Then bring them up in air, and, finally, back down at sides. Repeat at least 10 times, morning and night.

When your doctor says you are ready, begin these leg exercises. The position for starting is flat on the back, legs straight down. Simply draw one knee up to chest, then slowly straighten the leg and lower to mattress. Repeat with other leg. Next, draw both knees up to chest, and slowly straighten legs and lower. You may do these from 10 to 20 times, morning and night.

After three weeks or a month, do this: Stand very straight with back against wall, and try to press every inch of your spine against the wall. Then put both hands behind your head and inhale and exhale, slowly. This is excellent for toning the stretched abdominal muscles. Repeat at least 10 times, morning and night.

In another three weeks, you will be up to the squatting exercise. Stand very erect, hands on hips and slowly lower to floor until you are squatting on your heels. Keep your back straight as you lower. Then try to come back to standing position. You'll find that hard work but it is good exercise.

Man in the Kitchen

(News item: Britain has organized a traveling squad of women cookery experts to see that all runs smoothly in army kitchens.)

I

Thoughts of men on the loose in Army kitchens
Completely upset the gastronome,
They also unfailingly bring the shudders
To many a little woman at home.

II

Almost at once she scents the odor,
Of scorching toast and burnt oatmeal,
Tastes the "eyes" of the grubby potato,
That somebody didn't know how to peel.

III

Eggs hard as a brickbat on one side,
Albumen flowing from the other,
That surely must be the breakfast dish,
Cooked by somebody's husband or brother.

IV

Coffee made out of a nine-day brewing,
Soup covered over with a stringy skim,
That's the way it's bound to be served
If left to the awkward devices of "him."

She visions the dishes for the eating,
All variegated with rings and dots,
Glasses and cups in weird arrangements,
To cover up most of the table spots.

VI

Coffee cups must have yesterday's sugar
If "his" dishwashing follows the norm.

VII

Pans and skillets left rough as gravel,
Greasy pots stuck under the sink.
In fact, the goings on in camp kitchens
Are terrors of which she scarce dares to think.

VIII

Yet stories of newfangled sanitation,
And scientific cooking at the Army camp,
May possibly cause the queen of the kitchen,
Her ideas of the sloppy male to revamp.

IX

Could it be that the K. P. victims
Will come home kings of a new domain?
And she'll have to stop boasting to other women,
That when it comes to cooking he "hasn't a brain"?

Former WAAF Chief to Arrive

Air Chief Commandant Katherine Jane Treufusis Forbes, one of the founders and until recently director of the British Women's Auxiliary Air Forces, will arrive in Washington Monday from Canada to confer with the heads of women's military services in the United States.

A widely traveled person with a variety of interests and talents, Miss Forbes was born in South America and attended school in London. At the age of 16, during the First World War, she drove ambulances, did hospital work, and many other essential duties. Her kennels and her interest in the housing problems of Europe occupied her until 1935, when she aided in organizing women's auxiliary services in England. Later she was chief of the first officer's training unit. She was succeeded as head of the WAAFS by Lady Welsh, wife of Air Marshal Sir William Welsh, and has been in Canada on a special mission.

Social Workers Visit Capital on United States Tour

In Washington for a stay of about three weeks is a group of social workers from Chile, Brazil, Ecuador and Argentina, who have come to the United States to widen their field and learn more about their specialty so as to adapt some of the American methods to their own countries. The recipients of scholarships awarded jointly by the National Conference of Catholic Charities and by the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the girls have been training in the United States at different diocesan centers.

Senorita Balbina Ottoni Vicira of Brazil has specialized in community work at the Catholic Charity Center of the Archdiocese of New York while Senora Lucila Costes de Carrera was studying the organization of social service schools at the National Catholic School of Social Service of Washington.

From Chile, a country where social service work is well advanced, came Senorita Clara Calvo who worked in Chicago. As for Senorita Saira Arias of Argentina, while making St. Louis, Mo., her headquarters, she traveled through several States and up to Canada studying rural and industrial social service and actually living in some of the communities to share the life of their inhabitants. Two other workers from Venezuela and Paraguay trained at Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y., respectively. They are Senorita Albertina de Lucchesi and Senorita Catalina Stoduto, who have already returned home.

ON WITH THE DANCE

Washington's Number One Pastime Reflects Wartime Trend and Tempo

In time of war a nation dances—dances as it never danced before. And in its "light fantastic" tempos and touches can be traced the restlessness, efforts at escape, and the general dervish whirling of the generation that indulges in it with greatest abandon. This is the second in a series of articles on wartime dancing. The third will appear next Saturday.

By Jean Craighead

Struck with "dancing fever" in this Second World War, Washington is devising new steps and tempos—as American in style and interpretation as corn on the cob, but also accented with international rhythm and effects.

This trend is, of course, in keeping with a pattern cut in World War I when the ballroom tango, created in the Argentine and embellished in Paris, was picked up by the Yanks and brought "back home" from the war.

The French had added a Parisian touch to the South American rhythm, but the Americans, disliking set routines, improvised on the basic steps until the dance fitted the ragtime jazz. In order to adapt it to the American style of leading from the left, the original tango lost one step in the promenade and finished with a brisk corte.

Few did it well, so the medium was taken and Washington tangoed with a two-step flutter through the days of the First World War.

Sometimes the dance creates the music, as in the case of the American tango; and then again, an Irving Berlin comes along and his music creates the dance. The ballroom floor rollicked with a flag-waving foxtrot that was strictly "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," interpreted in the feet and knees.

With the peace came the boom of the 20's. Skirts became as reckless as stock market speculations, knees and legs were displayed gayly and American youth went to college in racoon coats and slickers. Hilarity and sophistication soared along on the biggest business boom the world has ever known. Out of this cyclone of plenty emerged a dance that was delightfully free, and yet skeptical—the Charleston.

The collegians took it over with a scream, and burst the walls of the fraternity houses with the shuffle and sidewise kick. But, the Charleston, as every other American dance, was doomed to invention and change.

Radios and recordings were developed, and furious mobs of flappers and drugstore cowboys bought up the songs of the sensational crooner Rudy Vallee. Rudy's voice was peculiarly adapted to the microphone and as his type rapidly became the style, the Charleston had to be modified to meet this lust technique. So it was revised and called the Blackbottom, revised again and named the Varsity Drag.

In 1927 the Nation was climbing toward the economic crash. Jobs were plentiful, money was changing hands like a hot potato, and the few that saw the impending disaster bought and sold all the more furiously to stave off the collapse as long as possible.

With the new inventions at hand, people were performing industrial miracles. Radios in every home, telephone conversations with ships at sea. Then, one day a young chap called Charles A. Lindbergh crossed the Atlantic to Paris in his papier mache "Spirit of St. Louis." The night of his eventful crossing the whole United States turned out on Main Street to celebrate. At the Savoy Ballroom in Harlem a group of young Negro dancers started improvising a dance with breaks and kicks to the hot jazz of a local band. "Shorty George" Snowden, an expert on jazz and jazz dancing, watched the inventive couples and remarked: "They must be doing the 'Lindy Hop.'"

The dance took its basic theme from the Charleston and broke into an open position with a steal from old folk dances. The styled vis-a-vis position was blasted out of existence with the

Lindy Hop; and American invention took free range

As the dance spread, musicians caught the feeling of the breakaway and rang in a suitable accompaniment — the laughing trumpet—that would tear apart any conventional dance step. The laughing trumpet in turn inspired a twist to the break; and set-form and pattern toppled overboard as everything from a cowboy do-si-do to the Hungarian turn was thrown into the dance.

In 1929, just before the crash, there came wailing out of the South a strange foreboding music. The blues and its sulky offspring in dance seemed to predict the crashing end of the gigantic '20's.

As wealthy families became paupers in eight hours, and industry was thrown into a panic, people turned to dancing and crowded the night clubs and dance halls while their fortunes evaporated. During this period a renaissance hit swing and professional dancers picked it up and lifted jazz into a new and refreshing art form.

Music Tribute To Be Paid to Armed Forces

Circled in red on the pre-Christmas calendar for many Capitalites is the forthcoming presentation of the Handel oratorio, "Judas Maccabaeus" scheduled for December 14 at Constitution Hall. With the Handel "Song of Victory" dedicated by Conductor Louis A. Potter to "The heroism of the armed services," and with wives of high ranking Army and Naval officers occupying the Presidential box for the evening, the event will have a distinct wartime accent.

Timely and patriotic in aspect, even though the oratorio has a setting that dates to 180 B. C., and has been interpreted in the libretto by an English clergyman of 1747, it admirably portrays admiration of military achievements of the armed forces and voices a poignant hope for an honorable and lasting peace. Then, too, as Conductor Potter puts it, "The music of Handel is so expressive . . . with a fine projection of the nuances of thought, ranging from fear and disheartenment to high resolve and triumph."

The Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle head the list of boxholders for the event, which will be a presentation by the Washington Choral Society.

League to Give Bolivar Portrait To Union Here

To commemorate the 113th anniversary of the death of Simon Bolivar, the International League for Bolivarian Action will present to the Pan American Union a portrait of the great liberator. The ceremony will take place at the Pan American Union on Friday evening, December 17, at 9 o'clock.

Among the speakers of the evening will be Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, and Dr. Ramon Ruiz, director general of the International League for Bolivarian Action, as well as Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union. The presentation of the portrait will be made by Charles A. Saab on behalf of the New York Chapter of the International League for Bolivarian Action, and His Excellency Julian Caceres, Ambassador of Honduras and vice chairman of the Governing Board of the Pan American Union, will accept the present and say a few words of thanks.

Memo: To The Boss

Sorry, Boss, there isn't any story for you. In fact there aren't any stories from all those leads you gave me. Why? Well you see, first I called up all those diplomatic names you had on the list, and their parties have all been cancelled. Reason? They've got flu.

Then I called up some of those Government officials' wives you wanted me to interview. They can't come to the 'phone to talk. Reason? They've all got the flu.

As a last resort, I finally called those names on the bottom of the list. You know, the State Department people. Well, at their offices the secretaries hummed and hawed, and said their bosses were in conference. I asked what time they'd be available, and they didn't really know. Said it might be a long conference. Well, I kept on the line all afternoon trying to get that special bigwig on the line for that story you particularly wanted.

Finally, I called and the phone rang and rang and just as I was about to hang up a strange voice answered. I asked who it was and he said he was the office boy. I asked him what time the boss left today and when he would be in tomorrow morning and he said, "Him? Why he ain't been in all week. He's home in bed with the flu!"

P. S.—I got a sore throat and my head aches. May I go home?

Edward Lane Schofield, left, and George E. Harris, executive vice president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, look over a passport and 100-year-old Chinese Christian Bible that belonged to the Rev. and Mrs. Peter Wood, Schofield's missionary grandparents. The Bible will be displayed Monday night at Hamline Methodist Church

By Robert Tate Allan

Forebears' Adventures

A graphic story of the adventures of his missionary grandparents and his mother was told yesterday by Edward Lane Schofield, branch maintenance manager for the Remington-Rand Co. here.

Schofield related how his grandparents, the Rev. and Mrs. Peter Wood, Scotch Presbyterians, ventured into the Chinese interior in the 1870's to carry on work for the British Bible Society and the Presbyterian Mission Board of Scotland.

In an interview, Schofield displayed a passport the size of a newspaper page and a Chinese Christian Bible, the latter estimated to be 100 years old, both of which were carried by his missionary forebears.

The local man's mother, Mrs. Nellie Green, was born in the interior of China in 1874, and was captured by Chinese bandits when only three weeks old.

Bandits' Captive

"Being the first white girl they had ever seen, she was idolized by the bandits," said Schofield, adding that his mother's feet were bound, Chinese fashion, to keep them tiny. His mother, who lives in Pittsburgh, still has the foot binding, he said.

When his grandfather sought aid from the villagers to rescue the captured child, the villagers stoned him, and it was only after the British authorities had gotten assistance from a mandarin that the child was finally released.

The missionary grandparents served in China from 1870 to 1886, according to Schofield, and later did missionary work in India and New Zealand. The Rev. Mr. Wood, a talented violinist, returned to Scotland toward the close of the century, and founded the Edinburgh Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Wood died in 1917, and Mrs. Wood, in 1924.

Bible to Be Shown

The meeting Monday will be under the auspices of the American Bible Society, the Washington City Bible Society and the D. C. organized Bible Class Association.

2183 Counted In 41 Retreats At Manresa

Father Robert S. Lloyd, S. J., spiritual director of Manresa-on-the-Severn, yesterday reported that 2183 men have attended 41 retreats there from April 3 to November 15.

FR. LLOYD

"This record is very satisfactory and especially noteworthy," he wrote in the Manresan, "in view of the fact that many men feared that war restrictions of various types might interfere with the steady progress of the retreat movement.

"The results show that those men who sincerely desired to make a retreat took all the obstacles in stride and were well repaid in many ways by their visit to Manresa."

Manresa is the retreat house of the Catholic Archdioceses of Baltimore and Washington, and those having visited there this year have included men from all walks of life, including many non-Catholics.

One of the most successful retreats was the one attended by Washington newspaper columnists and radio commentators in the summer.

Heralding the coming of Christmas in a world at war, the voices of 500 choristers from the National Cathedral School for Girls and the St. Alban's School for Boys rang out this week in a program at the Washington Cathedral that was broadcast overseas by the National Broadcasting Company. The girls are trained by Justin Williams and the boys by Dexter Davison of St. Alban's faculty. Davison arranged the choral program

Netherlands Church's Resistance Related

Imprisonment of pastors and parishioners and other Nazi penalties have failed to discourage Netherlands churches from inspiring and leading resistance against Nazism, according to H. W. J. Baroness van Tuyll van Serooskerken, American-born secretary of the Women's Committee of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, a Community War Fund agency. She said:

"Netherlands churches have opposed every effort of the Nazis to promote paganism and both Protestant and Catholic churches have united in an effort to protect the Jews and have repeatedly and openly denounced Nazi cruelty to Jews.

"The church has become the outstanding, outspoken enemy of Nazism. Some ministers and congregations have been punished, but by and large the Nazis have not dared to attack the church openly. The pulpit is virtually the last refuge of freedom of speech.

"The Netherlands may be occupied by the Nazis, but it is still far from being conquered. Its government functions in exile. Its people at home resist. Its refugees in other countries fight with the armed forces of the United Nations, work with the people of the United Nations for victory over Nazism."

Assistance to these refugees is one of the vital services given by the Queen Wilhelmina Fund which is supported by gifts to the recent Community War Fund campaign.

There Was Oil in Them Thar Rills!

THERE IS PRACTICALLY NOTHING in "In Old Oklahoma," the new screen feature at the Earle Theater, that hasn't been seen many times before, but its familiar turbulence is always good, and this time perhaps a little better than usual in view of the grandiose scale upon which Republic has utilized it.

Adapted by Thomson Burtis from his own novel, "War of the Wildcats," and skillfully scenarized by Ethel Hill and Eleanore Griffin, "In Old Oklahoma" is a quasi-historical document, dealing with the discovery of oil in the Southwest and the struggle to control the industrial empire which thus had its spectacular inception—let the Indians fall where they may.

The taciturn cowboy who flagged down the train and boarded the tycoon's private car after his horse had died under him, had different views about the Indians, as well as about the romance that seemed to be sprouting between the Pooh-Bah, who had hog-tied the oil rush at its beginning, and the little schoolteacher-author, out seeking a little of the sophistication she had written but never known.

Since the cowboy happened to be a former sergeant with the Rough Riders and the year 1906, it was not surprising that President Roosevelt gave him the green light in protecting the interests of the Indians. In this manner the picture is nicely guided into a double-barreled feud between Dan Somers and Hunk Gardner, with oil and Catherine Allen the stakes.

Familiar Ingredients

Upon that sketchy framework, the seasoned picture-gazer—particularly the one with a soft spot for "Westerns"—will be able to erect the detailed, melodramatic structure of fist fights, shootings, brush fires, duplicity, treachery, the bringing in of the gushers and the final wild race to Tulsa with a wagon train of "black gold" to beat the deadline set by the President, as a prerequisite to the signing of a Government contract. There is enough tumultuous action in the running out of this pattern to build a dozen ordinary, run-of-the-well thrillers.

To lend more than the usual substance to a rugged story of rough-and-ready romance and uncurbed violence, Republic has assembled a formidable cast.

John Wayne and Albert Dekker are a pair of robust rivals as Somers and Gardner, respectively, and Martha Scott, despite the strangeness of her surroundings after all those lachrymose roles, is an appealing heroine, who only occasionally seems a shade too naive for comfort—her own and yours.

The secondary roles are filled with equal acumen. As the lusty hotel proprietress, Marjorie Rambeau is cast in a made-to-order part, and Desprit Dean, the comically sagacious stagecoach driver, finds himself in the deft hands of George "Gabby" Hayes, one of the most reliable of the experts at this sort of thing. Sydney Blackmer offers a fair approximation of Teddy Roosevelt and former leading-man Grant Withers, once the husband of Loretta Young, has grown into exactly the type for a bulky and belligerent oil-rigger. Paul Fix is the wily Cherokee Kid and Robert Warwick the grim and tight-lipped Indian Chief.

What! No Blood?

There are, of course, the usual negligible discrepancies which, unimportant as they are, will annoy the realists. It is a miracle, for example, that Mr. Wayne and Mr. Dekker could slug each other around the way they do without either ever drawing a drop of blood or blacking an eye. And those horses that race 500-gallon loads of oil across miles of rough prairie and through rocky mountain gorges evidently think they're in a sulky race. They run off 3-minute miles by the hour without even working up a lather! But who cares, when life, love and honor are at stake?

Harry Anger's new stage revue is considerably more elaborate than usual and proportionately more colorful. It is opened by Eileen Ritter and six mandarins in a handsomely staged "premiere" of "Jade," Arden Clar's new composition that met with an enthusiastic reception at yesterday's first performance. Maysy and Brach add a touch of audience trepidation at this point in startling feats on a high unicycle—so high that when they pile up on it end to end, Maysy's hair-do is 'way up there in the flyloft. Lenny Gale, in the headline spot, proves an "impressionist" whose caricatures are of uniquely uniform excellence. The lad also commands a neat flow of humor. Lane and Claire write a period to the proceedings with another demonstration of what it's like to be "Fightin' for the Funnies" in terms of acrobatic dancing. They have contrived clever uses to which to put the comic section.

Miss Ritter and the Roxyettes are in and out of a succession of handsome scenes all the way, to the infinite benefit of the goings-on.

The newsreel, with first, comprehensive views of the Cairo and Teheran conferences, and an official reel in the interest of waste-paper salvage are the screen auxiliaries of a feature that allows no time out for dozing.

JOHN WAYNE AND MARTHA SCOTT, who develop probably the fightin'est love interest ever seen on a screen in "In Old Oklahoma," chief attraction for the new week at the Earle Theater. They are egged on by Albert Dekker, Marjorie Rambeau, George "Gabby" Hayes and numerous others of note in Republic's saga of the oil rush.

HEDDA HOPPER

RKO's Happy New Year

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 10.—Dorothy McGuire and Alan Marshall are set for an RKO picture some time in January. It may be "The Fair Barbarian" or Charlie Morgan's "The Flashing Stream." . . . They lose two more leading men to Uncle Sam this week—Kent Smith, who's finishing "Are These Our Children?" and Glenn Vernon, signed up from "Junior Miss." . . . John Craven, Frank's son, is Army-bound when he finishes "Purple Heart." He's a fine actor. Recently became a father . . . You'll rejoice with me that David Niven has become a lieutenant colonel. O, how he's longing to see his little grey home in West Hollywood! . . . David Selznick says: "Since You Went Away" will finish any year now. . . . George Seaton, in New York huddling with Billy Rose, wires that Richard Whorf will direct the play and design settings for Seaton's "Out of This World," which starts rehearsals next month.

DOROTHY McGUIRE

Off on Right Foot

Brendan Bracken, head of the British ministry of information, cabled Sam Goldwyn: "I have now seen the remarkable film, 'North Star,' and I am exploring your offer on behalf of Russian relief, which I am sure will be most gratefully received." Goldwyn offered first night's proceeds for Russian relief. Mrs. Winston Churchill's favorite charity. . . . Picture opens today in two London theaters. Sam also had a wire from Sam Spivak, Averill Harriman's assistant in Moscow, that the picture had been received there and would be shown both Russian and American officials. . . . New York cast of "Jason" is now complete in Hollywood and all doing well. Richard Conte, who's in "The Purple Heart," is getting Alexander Knox, Helen Walker, and Tom Tully, and they're coming to do the play here.

This-a and That-a

I asked Mary Pickford how the big three (she, David Selznick, and Chaplin) ever got together to buy Alexander Korda's stock in United Artists when the lawsuit Chaplin brought against Selznick is still pending. She said, "O, this was big business. Charlie says there's nothing personal in that suit." No, nothing personal—he just wants some of the profits David makes off his people. Mary's making auditions of likely youngsters for "Junior Miss" before putting their faces on the screen. I asked when she was going into production. She said, "I think I'm doing pretty well. After all, I produced two babies in 10 months. Sure, I adopted them but I've got 'em! . . . Adrian, needing more space for his 300 chickens and livestock, has bought the Zeppo Marx ranch in the valley. He'll add horses so he and Janet can take to the trails. He might look into Buddy Rogers' string of ponies. I understand Buddy's aiming to give 'em away. No place to keep 'em.

What Again?

Every time anybody signs up a comic, he's a threat to Bob Hope. It almost makes you laugh. Andy Stone thinks he's found the guy in Pat Henning, who'll run thru "Sensations of 1944" as the guy who tries to prove to Eleanor Powell that he'd be a good subject for her to publicize. He's been in vaudeville for years, and can do practically everything.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Dec. 10.—The Teheran dispatch, quoting Stalin as saying that victory would be impossible without American production, reminded Joe E. Lewis of this story: After W. Averill Harriman had completed his first mission to Moscow, Lewis saw him at the Copacabana ringside. "Averill," Lewis asked him, "what did Joe say to you?" . . . "Stalin said 'Tanks,'" said Harriman . . . "You mean 'T'anks,' like in 'T'anks, you're welcome?'" asked Lewis . . . 'No, replied Harriman. "Just 'Tanks,' like 'Tanks, Planes and Guns.'"

RAYMOND MASSEY

The owners of the Yankee Network probably will purchase the Bulova radio stations . . . Collier's will have a new editor soon . . . The movies of her Pacific trip, which Mrs. Roosevelt now is exhibiting, were censored by the Army, which cut out the most interesting portions . . . Alfred Drake, who plays the lead in "Oklahoma," reports for induction today. His role, one of the most coveted on Broadway, will go to an unknown, Bob Kennedy, who never before has been on the stage.

A few days ago the Navy reported that the famous submarine, Wahoo, is missing. The Wahoo was commanded by the 36-year-old Commander "Mush" Morton, whose favorite hunting-ground was Tokyo Bay . . . Commander Bolton, the Navy's West Coast public relations officer, learned that "Mush" Morton's wife was trying to reach him by phone. Bolton delayed answering the call, fearing to answer the hopeless questions he was sure she wanted to ask him. After two days, Bolton finally answered the phone. "I'm calling," said Mrs. Morton, true to tradition of the Navy, "to get the names and addresses of the wives of the Wahoo crew. I want to write letters to all of them."

In the prologue of the new Dodie Smith play, "Lovers and Friends," Raymond Massey is shown meeting Katharine Cornell. The time: 1917. Massey is wearing the uniform of a Canadian artillery lieutenant . . . The uniform is Massey's own. He wore it in the last war when he was a lieutenant with the Canadian artillery forces, and it still fits him perfectly. The show's tailor wanted to repair some holes which are in it. Massey refused to permit the repairs. Those are shrapnel holes. They've been there since 1916—when Massey was wounded.

Alfred Hitchcock leaves for England this week. At the Colony Restaurant, Hitchcock was asked: "How and when do you leave?" . . . "First," the thriller man replied, "I go to Grand Central, where I'll meet an old lady selling violets. I'll whisper to her 'M-42.' She'll give me a bouquet, in which will be a card bearing the sign 'M-43.' This is a code telling me to take a certain train. At the end of the ride I'll phone a Captain X, who will answer 'M-44.' Then I'll be blindfolded. When I hear the sound, of either a throb or a whirr, I shall know whether I'm traveling by plane or by boat. When the blindfold is removed, an old lady will hand me a card 'You are in England.'"

The Saturday Evening Post will institute a change in policy next month, in the publication of Ivan Dmitri's war-photos spread, without any text . . . Because "The Voice of the Turtle" is an assured success, and because there are only three in the cast —Margaret Sullavan, Elliott Nugent and Audrey Christie—the dressing rooms at the Morosco Theater have been converted into elegant suites for each, complete with kitchenette . . . Artur Rubinstein was asked for his autograph by a youngster who then asked: "What are you?" Rubinstein said: "I'm a pianist. If you didn't know me, why did you ask for my autograph?" The autograph hunter confessed: "I wanted your autograph because you look funny."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WHEN POPULAR, hard-working Ed Stettinius came in as Undersecretary of State, it was expected that he would soon work miracles of efficiency.

Ed had been trained in big business from the ground up. So it was expected that Ed would oil up the creaking old machinery of diplomacy and make it prance down Pennsylvania ave.

Ed has now labored mightily and brought forth his first great revolution. Frankly, it is a mouse.

One of the things for which the State Department has long been famous is its array of Negro messengers sitting in the corridors outside the executive offices. These gentlemen are among the elite of Washington's colored community. One was once Teddy Roosevelt's coachman. Another fought with Cordell Hull in the Spanish-American War. Many are lawyers and have probably sneaked in a little reading of the law while not ushering ambassadors in to see the Secretary of State or distributing coded messages from Cairo and Teheran.

A messenger sat at a table just outside the door of the Secretary of State, the Undersecretary, and each assistant secretary. But now Ed Stettinius, as his first great move to streamline the State Department, has taken these tables out of State Department corridors.

Instead of sitting just outside the door of each executive in order to open the door for distinguished visitors, the messengers now sit in what was once the men's lavatory. The room has been revamped, but even so, there is great indignation among the colored messengers. From their privileged status as escorts to ambassadors and Cabinet members, they are relegated to relative oblivion.

As far as efficiency goes, it doesn't matter much one way or the other—though it does look prettier.

North African Diapers

THE OFFICE of Foreign Economic Administration has now answered Senator Bridges' doubts about diapers. They have assured him that American mothers are not being discriminated against in favor of French or Arab women in North Africa when it comes to three-cornered baby pants—though it is quite true, as the New Hampshire Senator alleged, that a tremendous number of diapers were shipped to North Africa.

FEA explains that, following the invasion of North Africa, General Eisenhower's economic board requested a supply of diaper cloth. So 450,000 yards were sent in the first three months of 1943. However, these were taken out of old WPA stocks. Then, in May, came an additional shipment, making a total of 690,000 diapers.

Officials state that nothing has helped so much to pacify North African mothers and win friends for the USA as this all-important wearing apparel. They hope that the mothers of America won't mind too much. Besides, the French have now paid for every diaper received.

No Priority for Electric Chairs

BY A STRANGE TWIST of fate, the War Production Board has been put in the position of intervening in a murder case in Nebraska, and staying the hand of the executioner.

The State of Nebraska has been instructed by the courts to execute one Joseph MacAvoy on December 30, but it cannot perform the act without getting the necessary priorities on execution equipment from the WPB.

Last August 7, Pvt. Joseph MacAvoy of Brooklyn, stationed at Nebraska's Harvard Air Base, murdered 16-year-old Anna Milroy, of Sutton, Nebr. At the trial, MacAvoy confessed, "I hit her with the crank, but I didn't use the chisel. Somebody else did that."

The jury promptly brought in a verdict of guilty, recommending death. The death sentence was pronounced by the judge, and the date has been set for December 30.

But shortly after the trial, officials of the State Penitentiary discovered that their electric chair was out of order. It has been many years since Nebraska has had to punish a crime by execution, and the chair requires certain new parts before it can be operated.

When this was discovered, the State government sent a telegram to the War Porduction Board, asking for priorities on new electrocution equipment. WPB officials scratched their heads, asking whether the electrocution of a private in the Army could be called essential to the war effort.

Meantime, Nebraska officials began to look around for a way out, in case WPB turned them down. They found that Nebraska law, Chapter 29, Section 2504, gave them no choice. It read:

"The mode of inflicting the punishment of death in all cases shall be by causing to pass through the body of the convicted person a current of electricity of sufficient intensity to cause death."

Clearly, that eliminated death by hanging and death by the lethal chamber. Everything depended on action by the War Production Board.

And now, WPB has made its finding. It cannot grant priorities on the equipment. Executing Private MacAvoy is not essential to the war. This finding is open to appeal but, as things stand now, Private MacAvoy cannot be executed on the scheduled date.

South Pacific Tragedy

NAVY CHAPLAIN CARL KNUDSEN, Lieut. Commander, is back from the South Pacific with tales of both bravery and pathos.

Once he conducted a burial service on an island in the New Hebrides. (The Navy gives its dead a land burial if there is a port within three days' sail.) The services were carried out in the usual manner. The only persons present were the keeper of the cemetery, the dead man's devoted brother, the chaplain, and an old Negro grave-digger.

The keeper of the cemetery, in an effort to comfort the brother, proposed taking a picture of the scene to send home. At this, the brother began to weep.

"Then," says Chaplain Knudsen, "I was amazed to see the old Negro grave-digger come up to the man, put his hand on his shoulder, and say, 'Don't you cry about your brother now. He's never goin' to be in no more danger. He ain't goin' to have no more trouble. Your brother's safe in the arms of Jesus now'."

Christmas Harmony

Music is as much a part of Christmas as shopping and Santa Claus, and the Washington proponents of melody and already offering their wares to a receptive public.

The Washington Missionary College will present Handel's familiar and always lovely cantata "Messiah" at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Especially for the youngish, the General Alumni Association of George Washington University will present the combined men's and women's glee clubs in a program of Christmas music at Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H sts. nw. Friday night at 8 o'clock. The University Choir of Howard University is also set for its annual Christmas concert—at Andrew Rankin Chapel, Friday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Sunday, December 19, there will be a big musical treat at the Washington Cathedral (5:30 p. m.). The Cathedral Choral Society will present Poem for Violin and Organ by Leo Sowerby and a number of Christmas carols. The National City Christian Church will combine its Christmas pageant with a musical program at 8 o'clock December 19.

The Y. W. C. A. will present a carol program at the D. C. Public Library December 22, and a similar song fest at Union Station December 24.

Two music-loving aggregations have programs (and Christmas is not involved) scheduled as follows: The "15 to 30" concert series presents Patricia Travers, violinist, at Constitution Hall, 8:30 o'clock December 18. The Recorded Music Association, which sponsors selected concerts regularly for music-loving war-workers, plans a fine program for December 14—National Archives Building, 7:45 p. m.

JOE, THE HOUSE IS TERRIBLY WARM. MUST YOU HAVE SO BIG A FIRE?
YESTERDAY YOU SAID YOU WERE COLD

JOE, CAN'T YOU MAKE A BIGGER FIRE? THE HOUSE IS TERRIBLY COLD

WELL, LET THE FIRE GO OUT WHEN IT'S WARM, AND REBUILD IT WHEN IT'S COLD
JOE, IS THE FURNACE ALL RIGHT? I CAN SMELL HOT METAL ALL OVER THE HOUSE
I HAD TO MAKE A NEW FIRE. A NEW FIRE ALWAYS SMELLS LIKE THAT
